Britain's Real Ruler Old-Fashioned Daughter And Rosie Rosenberg Drugs in That Prison?

—By Arthur Brisbane—

RAMSAY MacDONALD, elected head of the British empire by the Labor party is here, the first British prime minister to visit the United States while in office.

Mr. MacDonald's reception will be that accorded to royalty, which is not exaggerating his importance.

The prime minister is the most powerful man in England. The King, addressing his Lords and Commons, says exactly what the prime minister tells him to say.

Miss Ishbel MacDonald, here with her father, will seem old-fashioned to many of our rising female generation.

She does not smoke or drink alcoholic liquors and does not paint or powder her face.

And most old-fashioned of all, she does look after her father and take a serious interest in public affairs.

If you see Ramsay MacDonald, labor prime minister of Great Britain, you may also see Miss Rosie Rosenberg, vivacious able young woman, the prime minister's private secretary.

Miss Rosenberg joined the Socialist party in London 11 years ago and has been MacDonald's secretary nine years.

Observe the difference between "Democratic America" and "Conservative Great Britain." Here, if you join the Socialist party and talk "that way," you stand a fair chance of being locked up. In Britain you may become secretary to the prime minister.

The tragic rebellion of convicts in the Colorado state prison ended yesterday morning with 158 convicts walking out, hands raised above their heads, in surrender.

Four leaders of the rebellion had killed themselves. During the night the convicts, at intervals, had thrown out of an upper window the bodies of guards captured and murdered by them, the warden having on each occasion refused to let them go free.

Once a prison inmate was a poor and miserable creature, with none and miserable friends, if any.

Some woman, sad-faced, might come to see the man in jail, bring her child to see him through the bars, giving him, perhaps, a few cents' worth of tobacco.

That is all changed in these hooting days. Convicts have, outside the prison walls, gangster friends that control money unlimited. Convicts can afford to buy privileges, including drugs, even at the high prices charged in prison traffic.

That drugs played a part in the Colorado outbreak, with its

Gem Robbers Get $22,000 in Chicago

Chicago, Oct. 5 (AP)—Five robbers early today held up a theater party and stole jewelry valued at $22,000.

Mr. and Mrs. James G. Hodgkinson, their two young daughters and Mrs. Hodgkinson's mother, Mrs. C. A. Roberts, were the victims. Hodgkinson is an insurance broker.

The party had just driven up in Mrs. Roberts' car to the Hodgkinson's home in a quiet section of Hyde Park, when the bandits, who had followed them from downtown, stopped and called to Hodgkinson that they were policemen.

From Mrs. Hodgkinson the robbers took an emerald ring she valued at $10,000, a diamond ring and a wrist watch set with diamonds. Hodgkinson gave up a diamond ring and $90. Mrs. Roberts lost a string of beads, but a $5000 ring was hidden by her gloves.

RACES PREVENT HUNT FOR RING

The continuation of the outboard motor races in the Charles Basin today prevented further search for the $2000 diamond ring which Mrs. Mildred T. Hickey, Shrewsbury sportswoman and outboard motor enthusiast, dropped overboard yesterday.

A flotilla of speed boats today were using the float next which Mrs. Hickey dropped the ring, and Metropolitan police were unable to continue search for the ring until the races were completed.

Mrs. Hickey was trying to hand the ring to her husband, T. Frank Hickey, Worcester leather dealer, who was standing on the public landing near the Union Boat Club. A wave nearly upset her boat as she was passing the ring to her husband, and the ring dropped into the water.

Mrs. Carl Mason of Bristol, Ct., who was seated in the boat with Mrs. Hickey, dove overboard and tried to bring the ring up from the muddy bottom. Two life guards, Frank Holland of Dedham and George Shinney of Charlestown, joined Mrs. Mason in her attempt to retrieve the ring. All three continued diving until darkness prevented further search.

Metropolitan police, who were called in to aid in the search, spent two hours dragging the bottom with a powerful magnet, but did not succeed in locating the ring.

CIGARET PRICE PEACE SENDS STOCKS UP

Industrials Keep Pace With the Tobacco Shares as Quotations Climb

New York, Oct. 5—Tobacco stocks skyrocketed from 5 to 40 points on the New York Stock Exchange today following announcement of an increase in cigarette prices by the leading manufacturers as the first step to end the cigarette price war that has been on for six months.

Bears were caught heavily short of stocks, rushing in to buy as prices soared.

American Tobacco common leaped 35 points to 195, while class B common gained nearly 40 points at 190.

Liggett & Myers skyrocketed 19 points to 100½, the class B rising 26 points to 160¾. P. Lorillard scored a 10-point gain at 258. Reynolds Tobacco B jumped 7 points to 60 and Schulte was up 15, at 200.

INDUSTRIALS KEEP PACE

The sharp rally in industrial stocks which featured the opening was carried along spectacularly at the close, with tobacco shares in the leading issues expanding from 5 to 25 points.

As usual the bears discovered that they had encouraged a sizeable bounding in pounding the market downward on the strength of their gloom propaganda.

Bargain-hunters and courageous bulls snapped up stocks before the bears had an opportunity to cover their short sales, and prices turned sharply higher.

The ticker was trailing about 45 minutes at the close.

The bears were pushed to the wall in the final period as prices of the leading stocks went soaring. Most of the speculative leaders closed the day at the highest prices.

HOOVER-MACDONALD CONFERENCE TO BE MOST INFORMAL

WILL AVOID ALL SPECIFIC DISCUSSION

by a crowd of officials and employes.

He was met outside by Eddie Savoy, aged negro messenger who has served many secretaries and greeted many distinguished foreigners. "Eddie" opened the door with dispatch and flourish.

There was a stag luncheon, quite informal, at the British embassy after which the premier and his daughter moved into the White House as official guests of the President and Mrs. Hoover.

Meantime interest centers in the opening of the afternoon conference and just how much progress was made at the Hoovers' Virginia camp.

The discussion of the limitation of naval armaments will, of course, be resumed. There is no willingness on anyone's part to abandon what may be, again, the first three lines in the program of reducing or stopping navies. This is to be left to the experts, unfettered by any "instructions" issued in London.

In the same way it was learned authoritatively that there is to be no discussion of the United States joining into the World Court or the League of Nations. Nor is there to be any discussion of a written entente or alliance between the two powers. The British desire is considered a closed issue and under no circumstances will be responsible for the abrogation of the tariff is to be barred.

It also was learned that prohibition and the administration alone, case will find no place in their exchange of views.

Mrs. Hoover and Girl Scouts Play Hostesses to Ishbel

Washington, Oct. 5 (AP)—The hostess of the White House and the hostess of No. 10 Downing st. London today grasped their first opportunity to spend a week-end together.

Mr. Herbert Hoover, continuing in her role of hostess, had the White House in a most hospitable and neighborly mood. Miss Ishbel MacDonald, daughter and official hostess of the premier of Great Britain, welcomed the role of guest.

The historic mansion presented a quite different aspect from that which greeted Miss MacDonald on her first brief official call upon her arrival yesterday.

Today it was the homelier, more domestic executive mansion that Mrs. Hoover likes. The great rose furniture, off to the upholsterers for months, happily had come home Friday, and the drawing room of the British Prime Minister been waxed, the chandeliers polished. Palms and many roses had gone through the White House doors to augment the California-like charm of the permanent patio room recently installed by the west window of the great upper hall.

To this picture, Mrs. Hoover, in her neighborliness, had arranged to add a dash of the spirit of American girlhood. She had asked in her friends, the Girl Scouts from the Little House Around the Corner.

Ishbel MacDonald Makes First Call on Mrs. Gann

Washington, Oct. 5 (AP)—Miss Dolly Gann, petite and efficient hostess of Vice-President Curtis, assisted in a call social leader Miss Ishbel MacDonald is a result of a morning trip to market.

At the time Miss Gann was told of the visit of the British premier's daughter was unexpected and for a time there was uncertainty whether Miss Gann could be located and return home in time. Miss MacDonald, however, had not arrived before Miss Gann returned.

Upon reaching the Mayflower Hotel Miss Gann immediately went to her suite, leaving instructions at the desk to be notified the moment the distinguished young lady accompanied by Lady Isabella Howard, wife of the British ambassador, entered.

MRS. GANN NOT NOTIFIED

It was said Mr. Gann had not been advised that a call would be made and had left home some time before word of the expected visit of Miss Ishbel was received.

The visitors arrived at 11:10 a. m. and remained about 10 minutes.

Mrs. Gann was the first to receive in her own home the greetings of Miss MacDonald. Chance, however, played a part in this. Two visitors previously had left cards at the homes of Mrs. Stimson and Mrs. Taft, the wife of the chief justice.

The order of the calls was surprising, in that it was not in accordance with the rank of the ladies, whose precedence is Mrs. Gann first, Mrs. Taft and then Mrs. Stimson. It is not required by custom, however, that ladies follow the precedence of others in the order of calling.

Miss MacDonald was up early on her first morning in the American Capital, held a conference with women newspaper correspondents, and then started the round of the calls on Mrs. Gann, Mrs. Stimson, Mrs. Taft and Mrs. Massey, wife of the Canadian minister.

"Is there room for everybody?" were the first words of the smiling daughter of Britain's premier as she greeted the correspondents. Her father was not present, having a full program of his own for the morning. Men correspondents also were absent.

Speaking of the reception in New York and Washington, Miss Ishbel exclaimed:

"It was wonderful, much more successful than I had anticipated. She added, however, that she personally preferred the quieter greeting she and her father received upon their arrival in America two years ago, when her father was not the head of the British government.

PREFERS QUIET RECEPTION

"But please do not misunderstand me, or think me lacking in appreciation," she said. "I like a quiet reception, but I appreciate the warmth of yesterday's greeting."

She said she planned to make her father's program in Washington very much her own.

She expressed a desire to meet representative American women in professions and industries as planned by Miss Grace Abbott of the Children's Bureau and Miss Mary Anderson of the Women's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor.

She told of her work with the women sections of the Labor party and of her work in her father's and his brother's campaigns for Parliament.

"I put more speeches," she said. Asked how she prepared her speeches she continued.

"I study them through. But I don't use them out. I don't have any notes."

One question was about statements in London papers that she would announce her engagement to her cousin Bonnie.

"I ignore such reports," replied Ishbel.

She told of her two sisters, Joan and Sheila, entering Oxford. Both were too busy with their own affairs, she said, to help her with her duties as her father's official hostess.

"I can't come here to preach to you," she said when asked her opinion on the controversial question of protective labor legislation for American women.

MacDonald Tells One to Curtis on Scotch Links Proprietor

Washington, Oct. 5 (INS)—"Did you hear the one about the Scotchman who ran a fee golf course?" asked Premier MacDonald of Vice-President Curtis, today.

"No, not that one," said Curtis. "Well," the premier explained, "I used to play there. It was a nice little course, though rather flat, with many hazards.

"I suggested the proprietor could improve it by putting in bunkers. After thinking it over, he said he didn't believe he would because it would take a player longer to get around and thus affect his revenue."

TARIFF LEAGUE RULES SENATE, SAYS KING

Attacks Provisions That Give the Manufacturers a Strangle Hold

Washington, Oct. 5 (AP)—A charge that the administrative provisions of the tariff bill were written to give "domestic manufacturers what some have denominated as a strangle hold on the domestic market" was made in the Senate today by Senator King, Democrat, Utah.

A careful examination of the bill, King said, would convince anyone that from beginning to end it was "aimed against imports whether made by foreigners, foreigners or American citizens," both imports and exports would diminish under the measure, he said, adding that all efforts to build up a merchant marine also would prove abortive.

The Utah Senator's attack came at the opening of a three-hour session, especially set aside to dispose of all remaining committee amendments to the administrative sections of the measure and clear the way for consideration of the rate schedules.

TARIFF LEAGUE GRIP.

King said the Senate was "in the grip" of the American Tariff League in the preparation of the Hawley-Smoot bill. This organization, of which Joseph R. Grundy is vice-president, he added "threw itself into the breach" against the Borah resolution which would have limited tariff revision to agriculture, in the hope of swelling the profits of American manufacturers through increased industrial rates."

King asserted the "reactionaries" won a notable victory when they put through the amendment drafted by Senator Reed, Republican, Pennsylvania, looking to future abandonment of the foreign value method of assessing ad valorem duties and were seeking now to "twist that victory."

TILT WITH SHORTRIDGE

Senator Shortridge, Republican, California, had an extensive exchange with King over the definition of "reaction," asking if he (Shortridge) could be termed a reactionary because he stood with Washington, Jefferson and others for adequate tariff protection. "Am I a reactionary," Californian said, "when I plead for protection to Florida as earnestly as I do for California?"

King said he had not used the term offensively, but meant to characterize a group in this country which stood for "standpat policies."

GETS A BEATING FOR SHOOTING UP POOLROOM

East Boston Man Is Mobbed, Then Locked Up After Fancy Gun Play

A shooting with all the aspects of a Western mining town barroom fracas was staged today in East Boston when Giovanni Mandolia, 48, of Webster st., East Boston, stood at the door of a poolroom at Webster and Orleans sts. and fired into the crowded hall with a revolver.

When the shots rang out pool and billiard sticks were dropped, and players and spectators scrambled under the tables and flattened themselves against the walls of the smoke-filled pool hall. Mandolia's aim was bad and the bullets crashed against the walls.

Patrolman Boudreau heard five shots and ran to the scene. Mandolia ran. With the police officer in the lead the crowd emerging from the poolroom, gave chase. After a race of 300 yards Mandolia was caught and given a severe beating by the crowd before Officer Boudreau could save him.

At the station Mandolia was charged with possession of a revolver, illegal for an alien. He will be taken to Boston Psychopathic Hospital for examination.

Guards will learn from the Colorado tragedy to watch their prisoners carefully, and to watch, with especial care, any guard or other person engaged in the prison drug trade.

In six days Chicago must send an electric current through the bodies of three negroes and send the three murderers we don't quite know where.

Recently lights went out in the jail where the electric chair is kept. The city spent $25m to make sure of plenty of electricity to kill the three men on October 11.

It would be embarrassing to strap a murderer into the chair and have the current fail.

Without boasting, civilization spends $25m to make sure of killing three negroes. It would not spend as willingly to save them from a criminal life.

Maine Ashman, Heir to $1,500,000, Fears He'll Lose His Job

PYE TO KEEP FORTUNE A SECRET

Says He Mightn't Be a Success at Wealth, for He Is Not Used to It

Portland, Me., Oct. 4—Having been definitely assured he inherited $1,500,000, Herbert L. Pye, veteran ash collector, was a worried man today.

He pleaded earnestly with reporters not to let word of his legacy get out.

"If that story spreads, boys," he said, "I'm ruined. There are a lot of other ashmen in Portland, don't forget. Competition in this business is terrible. Once my customers get the notion I'm rich, they'll give all their trade to my rivals."

Appalled by the dire prospect, Pye was grimly silent while he toted three brimming barrels of chickens from a Pine st. cellar.

"Shucks," he said. "Who knows what kind of a millionaire I'll make? I don't even know if I'll like it. I've never had any practice at being rich."

Back again on the seat of his rickety one-horse wagon, he reluctantly confirmed dispatches from New York telling of the fortune left him by George E. Rice, millionaire soap manufacturer, whom he saved from drowning in Casco Bay 18 years ago.

"Yep, it's all true enough," said Pye. "But I haven't got my fingers on the cash yet. I don't see any reason to be harrowing about it anyhow. It won't going to help me in my work any."

Visions of wealth certainly had not made much change in Pye's routine today.

When interviewers sought the ashen-millionaire at his shabby waterfront flat a 6 a. m., Mrs. Pye greeted them with surprise.

"Oh, you'll never find Pa here as late as this," she said. "He went in work a couple of hours ago."

Like her husband, Mrs. Pye was not inclined to be talkative on the subject of money in important quantities.

She said she was busy and proved her point by throwing a few of her household tasks. She keeps house for a sizable family. Besides herself and her husband, there are her three grown daughters, two sons-in-law and the grandchildren. All occupy the none-too-capacious Pye tenement.

"I don't know what good a million dollars would do me," said Mrs. Pye. "I don't have time to go gallivanting."

BROCKTON FAIR DRAWS 50,000 ON LAST DAY

Auto Races Center of Interest; Injured Diving Girl Is Expected to Recover

With a crowd of 50,000 on hand at noon and throngs still pouring through the turnstiles, the Brockton Fair opened its last and biggest day today.

Sunny skies and October tang in the air put everyone in good spirits when made up for the drab days with which the fair opened. Overhead the Goodyear dirigible Mayflower maneuvered to the delight of the crowd while the motors of a dozen racing cars fizzed and roared in the warming-up period before the afternoon races.

While waiting for the auto races, the crowd strolled up and down the Midway with its thousand and one wonders, and visited the industrial and agricultural exhibits.

The two big auto races of the day were the New England Sweepstakes and the President Field Derby, named for Fred F. Field, for many years head of the Fair.

Prior to the races an exhibition was staged by Boy Scouts.

Miss Jack Hoover, diving girl, who was injured in a 75-foot dive into a tank at the fair yesterday, is reported doing well at the Brockton Hospital and will probably recover, though still on the danger list. In making the dive she struck the side of the 12-foot tank and fractured a bone in her neck.

AIMING AT BIRD, BOY KILLS GIRL

Worcester, Oct. 5—Pauline Deguin, 7, of 5 Mosher st., was killed today by Howard Sharp, 15, of 120 Commonwealth ave., Worcester, who fired at a bird with his boy's 22-caliber rifle. The little girl was shot through the forehead.

She was rushed to the Worcester City Hospital, where she died soon after arrival. The boy was taken to the Worcester police headquarters, but no charge was preferred against him.

The girl, the daughter of Andrew and Agnes Deguin, was one of six children. Her father is a shoe worker. The boy is a pupil at the Worcester City Trades School.

RETAILERS SEE 15-CENT PRICE ON CIGARETTES

Believe 40-Cent Wholesale Jump Will Boost the Two-for-a-Quarter Brands

An increase in the local price of certain brands of cigarettes from two for a quarter to 15 cents straight was indicated today with the announcement of advance in wholesale prices.

The American Tobacco Co., Liggett & Myers and the Reynolds Co. increased their wholesale prices 40 cents a thousand in 1920.

Retailers say the wholesale prices will undoubtedly force retailers to increase their prices to 15 cents straight. Charles Hunter, of J. P. Manning Co., wholesaler.

The chain stores at present are operating on a very slight margin of profit and this advance in wholesale prices in my opinion will force an increase."

For several days, at least, popular brands of cigarettes will still sell for twenty-five cents for two packages or $2.15 per carton of 200. Officials of Liggett's, United Cigar Stores and D. A. Schulte, Inc., expressed their belief that within a few days prices must necessarily advance to their old level of fifteen cents a package, but said that present prices will be in force until changes are ordered from their New York offices.

SAYS COSTE IS IN MANCHURIA

Paris, Oct. 5 (INS)—Capt. Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte, French airmen given up for lost in an attempt to shatter the non-stop distance record, landed at Kowehinza, a tiny village near Tsitsihar, Manchuria, a dispatch from Harbin said today.

If the dispatch is true it means the Coste-Bellonte distance record by more than 400 miles.

The dispatch quotes Coste as saying they landed at 3 p. m. yesterday.

There obviously is some mistake in time or in the landing who not made after a direct non-stop flight. The airmen took off from Le Bourget field on Friday, September 27, with fuel for 50 hours and last Sunday were reported sighted near Irkutsk, Siberia.

There is a possibility the message was sent by the fliers some days ago and delayed in transmission.

The air ministry confessed itself unable to understand the message, and took immediate steps to verify it.

Woman in Jail Makes $300,000 in Market

New York, Oct. 5—In the six months she has been incarcerated in the women's penitentiary on Welfare Island, Mrs. Esther Evans Wilson, 39-year-old Washington, D. C., society matron and noted as a big game hunter, has "cleaned up" $300,000 in Wall Street.

Mrs. Wilson was convicted of second degree assault for shooting her estranged husband, Dallett H. Wilson, prominent lawyer and advisory member of the Republican National Committee, in his office on Fifth ave. on the evening of March 20, 1928. Wilson eventually recovered from the wounds.

The municipal parole board, which has jurisdiction in cases where a judge imposes an indeterminate term of from six months to three years, fixed Mrs. Wilson's imprisonment at one year.

Since she arrived on Welfare Island, Mrs. Wilson has kept very much to herself, refusing to associate with the other inmates. At her request she has been placed in a cell by herself and there she has devoted herself to writing and reading, and also to the daily scrutiny of the stock market.

Some of the stocks which she bought during the year have gone up as much as 240 points, according to a business associate, and she has displayed unusual shrewdness in picking securities that went up and in "unloading" at the right time.

STOLEN BONDS RECOVERED

Springfield, Oct. 5 (AP)—All but $1000 of $10,000 of negotiable bonds stolen from the Springfield Safe Deposit & Trust Company in March, 1928, have been recovered by the police here, it became known today.

Except the fact that an unnamed Boston law firm acted in some manner as intermediary, no statement was forthcoming as to the manner of the recovery. It is believed that a pal of Maurice Handlemann, known as "Worcester Red," is involved.

Handlemann, who is now serving a prison term in New York for larceny, was identified as one of two men seen in the banking rooms the day the bonds were taken from the desk of a bank official during his momentary absence. While the bonds were negotiable, extensive circularization would have made this difficult and may have led to steps for their relinquishment.

The award was to be conferred formally later in the day. Early now is in Washington.

It was made upon recommendation of the army decoration board, which has reconsidered the part played by survivors of the American detachment which was commanded by Early. He was wounded and York succeeded him in command. The latter is understood to have appeared before the board and recommended granting Early the award.

Ishbel Sorry to Miss Seeing Ball Game

Washington, Oct. 5—"It is a great thing to die for one's country, but it is a greater thing to live for one's country," said Ishbel MacDonald, 20-year-old daughter and pal of Ramsay MacDonald.

Miss MacDonald, who is a clever young woman, totally absorbed in her father's work and in helping improve the conditions of the working people in London, says she would not give up helping her illustrious dad for marriage.

This competent, wholesome young woman, who is always at her famous father's side, is disappointed in one thing so far as her visit to this country is concerned. She wanted to witness a baseball game and it can't be arranged, she said.

Miss MacDonald is equally interested in social work, including welfare housing conditions, child welfare and education. In speaking of this she said: "I do not care so much for politics. My real interest is in social welfare, but I presume that it is necessary to get into politics. The problems of the needy and unfortunate can be best met by good government.

WOMEN WANT PEACE.

"I haven't any career and exact imagine giving up the work of assisting father in order to be married.

"The women of England want to insure peace. The memory of the war lies upon us still. We do not want another conflict. The women of England cannot bear to think that they are giving up sons and daughters to participate in another war.

"All human beings should strive to insure the peace of the world. That is my message to America. It is also the message of my father."

The brown eyes of this brilliant, lovely young woman glower as she talked of her father and his purpose. A wonderful bond exists between them. Miss MacDonald has taken the place by her father's side made vacant by the death of his wife, the late Margaret Gladstone. MacDonald, who was beloved by all the people of England.

MUST TRAIN CHILDREN.

Continuing, Miss MacDonald said: "As women we have the greatest work of all to do—to train children to glorify peace instead of war. For generations children have been taught to glorify war, to see war as an opportunity for glory. The mothers of the world should use that power and bring up children to love and desire peace instead of war.

"Let the women of the world outlaw war from the cradle. Let us teach the children of every country what the Englishwomen of today know as well, the horror and waste of war, that war does not pay, that it destroys human happiness, that the difficulties and quarrels of nations can be adjusted through arbitration and without recourse to killing. To live for your country is greater than to die for it."

ASKS FULL SHIP BOARD PROBE

Washington, Oct. 5 (AP)—Asserting that the present shipping board is not functioning as the United States Shipping Board was planned as a co-ordinate body, Senator McKellar, Democrat, Tennessee, as a result of Campbell General McCarl's report of ship sales by the board to irresponsible concerns at greatly reduced prices.

The resolution went over for future consideration without debate. President Hoover yesterday ordered the Department of Justice to conduct an inquiry of the shipping board's activities and the Senate leaders had expressed a willingness to leave the investigation to the department.

Senator McKellar proposed that a committee of five be appointed to make a thorough investigation of the United States Shipping Board and merchant fleet corporation and especially the sales of ships.

SMITH STILL GOOD NAME

"Calling Mr. Smith!"

And if all the Smiths, mister and otherwise, whose names appear in the Metropolitan district telephone book were gathered in the lobby of a single hotel of that were possible, you understands, several of them would likely be killed in the crush. You see, the latest telephone directory carries 21 columns of Smiths.

The Johnson family runs second with 15 columns of subscribers bearing that name, while the Browns are just a shade under the 15 column mark.

The Sullivans outnumber the Cohens 11½ columns to eight. The Whites beast 10 columns, while the Jones occupy seven columns.

And while Boston is the Hub of the Universe, the Celts form no slight part of the representation. No less than 85 columns in the directory are devoted to persons whose names carry the suffix Mac. The Macs use up 23½ and the O's show a total of 31½ columns.

In the colors, the Whites already listed, head the group. The Greens carry three columns, the various shades of Grays carry 2½ columns, and the Blues also have a goodly representation.

Highbrow Hats, Baring Forehead, and Soft Black Velvet Tams Are Favored by Fashion

SKETCHED IN PARIS

New Styles Suited to Almost Any Day Costume

Paris Bureau of the Boston Evening American

PARIS, Oct. 5.—Highbrow we are indeed this season, and those beautiful foreheads that concealed themselves in answer to the dictates of fashion, may now offer themselves serenely for public observation and approval. We wonder, incidentally whether it was the law of compensation that prompted la mode to reveal the brow, while she urged concealment of the knees, and balanced the deep "V" decolletage with long trailing skirts. Perhaps be the same token, many off-the-face hats, are quite low at the neck. Anyway, there is much cause for speculation and analysis in the very new aspects of the mode.

WE find just now a tremendous vogue for soft velvet tams, toques and small hats that can be worn alike with sports costumes and more formal frocks. Such hats are flattering and not too elaborate and so they accentuate pleasantly almost any type of daytime costume. We show today a Reboux beret of black velvet that may be manipulated into a multitude of soft becoming folds, according to individual requirements. With it is worn a coat by Paquin in beige wool, with black velvet loops and knots at the back of the neckline.

ANOTHER interpretation of the vogue for black velvet hats is the illustrated model from Marguerite Parsy. The supple brim is rolled up sharply in front and held by a jewelled arrow.

SKETCHED IN PARIS

THE close crown has transverse cordings of velvet and a thick tassel or two is placed at one side. This is another example of the fact that looks equally at home at luncheon or at a sporting event.

'Tell Us Truth About National Defence,' Insists Child

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD
Former Ambassador to Italy and Noted Author

The common sense citizens of this land must be impressed with the fact that the Shearer investigation has been somewhat boyish.

The best fruit it has had so far is ripening into an investigation of all lobbies. The Hearst press had consistently demanded that any real inquiry about lobbyists should not stop with an attack on Shearer, who has at least stood up in his shoes, or with gentle investigation of shipbuilders who have looked around, without necessity for so doing, for the long grass and the tall trees.

To investigate all lobbies means not only that the pacifist groups and internationalist groups with affiliations with Red propaganda should be investigated as to the source of their funds; it means also that publicity bureaus and other hypodermics of propaganda, injected by sly broadcasting, printing and lecture mediums, should be uncovered.

Richard Washburn Child

They should he made to disclose which foreign countries are trying to put our people to sleep as to our national defences and as to intrigues that will hog-tie us and ring-nose us and lead us into European intrigue.

We want the closest co-operation with our friends the British—with our eyes wide open.

For those ends the Shearer investigation appears a little green. If it was egged on by fanatic pacifists and internationalists to convince the people of the United States that navy men are "big navy men," it has utterly failed.

So far as any testimony has been brought out and substantiated, neither our delegates, nor our naval officers, nor the shipbuilding companies nor even Shearer asked at Geneva for anything more than honest "yardsticks" and naval parity. And even this did not include naval bases, nor anything like equality in merchant marine nor any guarantee that our commerce should have the freedom of the seas.

Declares 'Nothing' Revealed By Shearer Investigation

Do we, as a people, realize even now that the present negotiations for naval parity have not been disclosed except in the vaguest of terms and that it appears also that when we are through there will be more cruisers and submarines in the world rather than less?

Do we realize that we have a second or third class navy?

Do we realize that no adequate answer has been given as to whether our equipment is obsolete—regardless of tonnage?

What was brought out in the Shearer investigation from the shipbuilders about our naval needs? Nothing.

What has been brought out from Shearer about our naval needs? Nothing, apparently, except that which the investigators of the naval committee could not suppress.

It requires no "bass drum" and no "bug" of an American citizen to want to know the facts about our navy and about the facts as to our defencelessness and about foreign fortifications and bases in the West Indies and about how readily the Panama Canal and New York city could be destroyed by air attack.

These are the most important facts to bring out in this investigation.

We do not care so much whether all the great shipbuilding executives wore smoked glasses and could not see little Shearer when they passed him at the meeting place or whether the British secret service agent, Wiseman, signed a secret document which the Senate investigators refused to give the press on Tuesday, or whether there is a vague hearsay record of Scotland Yard against Shearer which reads more like a poison pen letter from a lady than sense. Or whether Shearer went down the deck in Westchester County to see Scotch put ashore. Or whether he paid his income tax. Or whether, under Senator Allen's publicity lurcan, he was engaged as a Hoover campaign propagandist.

All this is mud without fertilizer.

We do not even care a great deal that the investigation so far has appeared not only boyish but strangely unfair, because there appeared an obvious attempt to blast Shearer and sling him bare before he was allowed to testify on the business on hand.

Urges Rael Naval Experts Be Called On for the 'Truth'

I am not Shearer's attorney. I never saw Shearer and perhaps all that mud, real or not, is none of our business unless we dislike methods of bringing on a witness already badly damaged by officially unbossed accusations, no matter where they come from, and hearsay publicity broadcast by some Senators.

What we really care about is that if investigations are to be held that we get facts and do not have to see captains of industry doing table-tipping and dematerializations.

What we really care for—now that the box is open—is to have the Senate call in real naval experts who, without prejudice to their careers, without gags and silencers, can tell us the truth about our defenses, their up-to-date efficiency, the safety of our coast and Panama under attack of modern plane bombing.

What we look for is identification and finger printing of foreign hands which may caress us into slumber—on debts, on tariffs, on merchant marine, on defenses, whether they do it directly or by the propaganda organizations which try to draw salaries by dragging the churches into politics.

What we look for is a demand that every corporation which interests itself in the tariff shall send in a sworn statement of lobby expenses and their campaign contribution direct or indirect during the last five years.

If Shearer's partly paid patriotism can get us these things—and not any mere wobbly investigation of the remains of the poor buttonhole lobbyists around the capital and the White House he will have done a great service, whether he intended it or not.

For those who pussyfoot now, this country is beginning to have an intense disgust.

Start a lobby to end lobbies.

SECRET BRITISH DATA WORRYING SENATORS

Washington, Oct. 5 (AP)—Senator investigators intend to learn the source of the mysterious document placed before them by William R. Shearer and purporting to be a secret British record of espionage system in this country.

That will be one of the loose threads of the investigation into Shearer's activities as an agent of American shipbuilders at the unsuccessful 1927 Geneva naval conference which the committee will pick up on the resumption of hearings late next week.

Chairman Shortridge wants to know how and why such a paper, the authenticity of which has been challenged, has been circulating in this country. He also is interested in the testimony of Shearer that the name of William Wiseman was added to the paper before it was photographed at the Navy Department.

Shearer described Wiseman as "the chief British spy in this country during the war." Now in New York, Wiseman has wired the committee challenging the paper, which he said he understood to be a "clumsy, absurd forgery."

Shearer also said he got the papers from Judge Summers and that Summers informed him a secret service agent named Wheeler in Los Angeles told him Wiseman was the author of the report.

All persons named by Shearer probably will be called by the committee, which has not yet made public the document.

Senator Allen, Republican, Kansas, has a report from the navy intelligence service attacking the authenticity of the paper.

The committee has not determined how many of the shipbuilders will be recalled as a result of Shearer's testimony. It seems certain, however, that investigation will be made into Shearer's story that the shipbuilders told him the French E. Kellogg, former secretary of state, called the British shipbuilding officers "on the spot" and ordered them to drop their Geneva agent.

The committee hearings will not be resumed until after Premier MacDonald's visit.

PLANES OFF IN 5017-MI. TOUR

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 5 (AP)—Flying a Red Travinet biplane, C. W. Meyers, Cleveland, piloted the first plane from the Ford airport at 10 a.m. today, inaugurating the 1929 national air tour.

Three women pilots were among the group. They are: May Haszlip of Kansas City, piloting an American Eagle biplane; Frances Harrell of Houston, Tex., in a Moth biplane, and Mrs. Keith Milby of New York in a Fairchild K R-31.

One minute after Myers took off, Capt. William N. Tancaster, also flying a Trainer, was sent away on the 507-mile tour. More than a score of planes entered in the tour were given the starting signal at one minute intervals.

The fliers headed for Windsor, Ont., airport of entry to Canada, where they will go through the Canadian customs. After luncheon at Windsor they take off for Toronto to spend the night.

The effect of starting the planes off at one minute intervals on the short hop from the Ford airport to the Canadian port of entry, about 15 miles distant, was to put a continuous string of planes in the air, the first plane reaching the first landing place before the last plane had made the takeoff.

TURN A GARAGE INTO CHURCH

With its parked autos pushed to one side and its oil stained floor freshly scrubbed for the occasion, the Granite avenue garage in the Cedar Grove section of Dorchester will serve as unpivoted church tomorrow for Catholic worshippers of the neighborhood.

Cardinal O'Connell has established a new parish in the Cedar Grove district and appointed the Rev. William F. Twohig, family of St. Mark's Church, Dorchester, as pastor. Land for a new church has been purchased, but Fr. Twohig chose not to wait for architects and builder.

He announced today that first masses for his new parishioners would be celebrated at once in whatever quarters were found available.

Tomorrow's services in the garage will be at 7, 9, 10:15 and 11:30 a. m.

Shouse Says G. O. P. Fears Tariff as Issue

Emporia, Kan., Oct. 5 (AP)—In the fight being waged in Congress by Democratic Senators against the Republican tariff bill as regarded by Jouett Shouse, chairman of the Democratic National Executive Committee, as an important part of the party's preparation for the next congressional and presidential campaigns.

Speaking at a dinner here attended by State Democratic leaders, Mr. Shouse declared the Republican party has abandoned its "pretense of tariff revision to benefit the farmer" and is bent on rushing the tariff bill through Congress, "fearing to go to the country with the bill as an issue" in next year's congressional elections.

The domestic help problem is solved by taking a Want-Ad apartment and the best are advertised daily on the For Rent columns.

2 FLORISTS SUE MRS. M'LEAN FOR $4872

Worcester, Oct. 5—Two suits in oil flowers costing $4,872.65 were filed today in Superior Court against Mrs. Edward B. McLean of Washington, widely known society matron, whose automobile was attached here a few days ago when she drove from her summer home in Newport to board a train for Chicago.

Because the automobile was attached here the suits were filed here. One was brought by J. B. Leikens of New York for $4,186.15 and the other by J. H. Small & Sons of New York for $686.50.

Mrs. McLean's costly automobile was released from custody when a bond was given to cover possible court damages.

Among items in the bills charged to Mrs. McLean is one for flower table decorations on August 1 for $375.75. Another is for $941.65 for floral decorations of the estate and a third for $290 for a basket of orchids. All the flowers were delivered to Mrs. McLean's summer home in Newport during the summer, according to the plaintiff.

TUNNEY'S WIFE UNDER KNIFE

Berlin, Oct. 5—Mrs. James J. (Gene) Tunney, wife of the former heavyweight champion of the world, underwent an operation for appendicitis here today. The operation was reported as being successful. The appendix was removed.

The operation was performed at the clinic of Professor A. W. Meyer, the famous German surgeon who saved Mrs. Tunney's life when she was close to death from an abscess while visiting on Brioni Island in the Adriatic this spring.

In the operation performed on Brioni Island the organ itself was not removed, due to the patient's critical condition at the time.

Mrs. Tunney was taken to the clinic on her husband's yesterday. It is said there was no emergency, but an operation was deemed advisable.

Tunney left his wife at the clinic last night and returned to his apartments in the Hotel Esplanade. He was still at the hotel when reached by telephone this morning, and informed that Dr. Meyer had already begun the operation.

"You certainly caught me this time," the ex-champion said. "I was just going to call the clinic to find out about it."

The Tunneys arrived here early this week from France, and immediately called on Dr. Meyer. The visit gave rise to erroneous reports that Tunney himself had to undergo an operation, but this was discouled both by the surgeon and the fighter himself.

Through his secretary, Tunney later gave out details of the operation performed today on his wife.

"The operation lasted half an hour and was a full success," he said. "The operation proceeded normally, and there were no complications whatever. Things turned out exactly as Professor Meyer predicted when he operated on Mrs. Tunney at Brioni.

"My absence during the operation was more or less according to plan. Dr. Meyer wishing to spare me too much excitement. Mrs. Tunney behaved most bravely, I am told."

Washington, Oct. 5 (AP)—Senator Blease, Democrat, South Carolina, in the Washington police department today [illegible] during a Senate investigation of the police department, brought the police department into the current controversy over the death of young Miss Vaughn McPherson, he said.

"Why, you can't stop a thing like that, and it's foolish to try.

"If some policemen do it to fatten their records, even though they have to disgrace some young girls name through the mud.

As to arrests for drunkenness, he asked:

"What's the sense in arresting a man because he's got a few tall glasses aboard? If he's minding his business and on his way home why arrest him? Of course, if he is not, he ought to be arrested."

COMING TO GRIPS WITH REVIVALS

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

REVIVALS of good old plays seem much in order during these days of stress in Boston. Ethel Barrymore in Clare Kummer's sparkling comedy, "Declasse," Sothern and Marlowe in Shakespeare, and Walker Whiteside in Grant Mitchell in "The Tailor Made Man" brings its own promise of richness to come. If there is anything in the theatre like an honored reputation for faithful duty to his Alma Mater, Mr. Mitchell could start Moulton at the Plymouth upon a nine season of classic revival.

IN this respect of The Tailor Made Man, the part to be played by Mr. Mitchell was originally done by Hale Hamilton, who made a great success of it. Mr. Hamilton is now playing the part of Mr. Moulton in the Broadway production of "The Tailor Made Man," which is now in its second year in New York. "THE picture is "Jungle," which Colonel Synchrotone plans to make as a road show production in color and sound. I hate to talk money about pictures because always seems to me a bad omen, but we are told no expense will be spared to make this jungle animals as a 25 talkie.

You can see from the cast that Colonel S-y-n-c-h-r-o-t-o-n-e feels the best of none is good for them. Eleanor Boardman will be the leading lady. She plays the countess and, with her figure and looks, that ought to be easy.

Jean Hersholt is the hero. The picture goes into production this coming week.

EVERYONE expected that George Olsen and his band would get themselves in the movies once they came to Hollywood. What is good enough for the Ziegfeld "Follies" and the big town revues is good enough for the talkies. Olsen and his boys have been signed by the Fox Company for "The New Orleans Frolic." Mrs. Olsen, who is the former Ethel Shutta, a Ziegfeld star, arrives in about three weeks with the new baby. He said that she has had several film offers and will probably make a picture when she gets here and the baby is old enough to be left with a nurse. The Olsens are evidently here to stay, for the band is playing each week at the Biltmore Hotel and the Fox contract is for more than one Olsen appearance.

WE hear out in Hollywood that Virginia Cherrill will marry Buster West before she returns to New York to take up his stage career. We also are told that David Mir, who opened the Carina's Charm, is taking a few days off in Palm Beach in All Quiet on the Western Front." David is the nephew of the late czarina and one of the most popular Russian refugees in the film colony. Another thing we hear is that "Hot for Paris," Victor McLaglen's next picture, is not going to come out as "The Cock-Eyed World" and as reported.

Here is another piece of news. Eddie Nugent has just signed a contract for "Dance Hall." Olive Borden's and Arthur Lake's next picture for R. K. O. By the bye, we see Olive and Arthur Lake about quite a bit together. Maybe they are leaning their lines. We don't say differently.

WHILE Janet Gaynor is enjoying her honeymoon in Honolulu under tropical skies with Lydell Peck, Charlie Farrell and his pals are playing New York, a treat. Hollywood did its best to discourage Charlie from singing and playing his accordion and saxophoning. But what Hollywood disdained the theaters throughout the country are applauding. Charlie and his accordion are making personal appearances in the key cities. Maybe the noises Charlie made were music. I hear so many different degrees of radio from my apartment that perhaps I am not qualified to speak. Charlie and Janet get together again on "Bonaparte," with Al Santell directing.

IT'S one thing, I suppose, to come out here and make a picture and another to do an encore. Van and Schenck have finished "Take It Big," but it's not their swan song for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. A TORCHLIGHT procession on the campus, showing all the color and excitement of a pre-big-game rally by college students for their football team, is graphically shown in "College Love," the 100 per cent talkie feature of collegiate life now at the Park.

On the evening before the big game of the season, all the students of Caldwell college build red light a huge bonfire and, carrying torches, parade around the flaming pyre. Crowds, no less enthusiastic than the men students, sing their college tunes while they frolic and skylark around the fire.

The entire exhibition contest which follows the next day also is shown in complete detail with all the excitement of the crowd, their songs and cheers being reproduced in sound. The intimate conferences between the coach and the players between halves of the mythological as well as what actually happens in a huddle in the middle of the field, also are shown and can be heard in accurate detail.

AUTHORS IN DEFENSE OF PLAY

By WILLIAM JOURDAN RAPP and WALLACE THURMAN

A MOST interesting comment on our play, Harlem," opening Monday at the Shubert-Apollo, has come from a Negro writer, writing in a Negro paper. He says:

"Hitherto all American plays purporting to portray phases of Negro life, except those of O'Neill, have been written from the point of view that Afroamericans seldom behave like human beings. The prevailing dramatic philosophy is that while the main motives of all other peoples are ambition, love, and the desire to get rich, Negroes are concerned solely in pleasing God and cleaning the corners from which their souls funnel time take an interest in world affairs. They are supposed to be having the limited intelligence of somewhat backward children.

"The characters of Harlem are people whose talk, clothes, conduct and motives are as recognizably human as those of the characters of Broadway or Fourth Ave.

"In short, this writer maintains that when Negro drama presents Negroes as well and white Negroes call white folks' niggers while Harlem actually is beginning Monday, will be 'White folks' movers, consist of three distinct colonies. The old servant or mammy type, known derisively among the Harlemites as 'Uncle Tom' and 'Aunt Jemima'; the 'high-yellow-foot type, typified by such vaudevillians as Bert Williams and Miller and Lyles, and the superstitious praying type, who are always thrown into a short fear by darkness, lightning and thunder.

On the other hand, the dramatist, who portrays the Negro as reacting to life in the same manner as white, except his vocabulary is more colorful, or, perhaps, being accused of writing like white folks and not having played in blackface. The fact that the black number can always be identified actor with the white theatre audiences, but many critics to question the authenticity of this part of the play.

And because most of the characters are not 'white folks' niggers,' other critics ascribed the stark realism of the play entirely to the natural acting of the players, seemingly not realizing that Negroes have always been able to act this naturally because the lines they spoke and the situations they found themselves in were perfectly familiar, most of them having spoken such lines and found themselves in such situations in real life.

Kreisler Tomorrow

In Symphony Hall at 3:30 tomorrow afternoon Fritz Kreisler will make his Boston entrance. The great violinist will be accompanied by Carl Lamson. The program includes Vivaldi's Sonata quasi Concerto in A minor, Bach's "Chaconne," Saint-Saens' Concerto No. 3 in B minor, Beethoven's Romance in A major, and Wieniawski's fantasy on Hebraic themes.

Two Hearts That Beat as One

AUSTIN BURLEIGH AND ALMA SMITHE
IN "HARLEM," which opens Monday at the Shubert-Apollo. Mr. Burleigh and Miss Smithe are as romantic as the playwright permits. And both adhere as comedians to this play of negro life.

PARIS GIRLS AT HOWARD

AT the Howard Athenaeum, beginning Monday, will be another Mutual burlesque attraction, "Parisian Flappers." In addition to this there will be selected vaudeville, moving picture and the world series results every playing day. The burlesque company includes many of the names of the beauchorus girls that have been seen in Boston burlesque houses during the last few years. Bobbie Nissen, soubrette, and Olive Ward, prima donna, are the principal girls. Bobbie Nissen, a pert little girl, with pep and personality, will offer a feature of genuine merit, and Irene Cassin will contribute her share of the merriment. The comedy element will be alive with bright material and well placed in the hands of George Leon and Harry Morris.

Sixteen flippant flappers will be seen with the chief attraction, and they too will have their chances to display their wares to the glances of the audience. Others of note in the cast include Mickey Ramsay, Peggy Smith, Pete Segrist, Bobby Nissen, Dick Richards and Frank Naldi.

The vaultville will offer Ray & Sa Dasilva, Cy Plunkett and the Ganz of stars, and Winifred and Mills, seven comedy acts. The pictures present John Gilbert in "The Masks of the Devil"; Bebe Celone and Wedell Hersey.

Bobbie Nissen

Olive Ward

BURLESQUE IS CASINO BILL

THE "Honey Burlesquers" will play in Boston Monday at Waldron's. The two street-silly funny sketches are "A Courtroom Scene" and "A Barroom Scene." Special opportunities are afforded for some delightfully complicated situations and several dancing specialties. The efficient company includes Clyde Bates, Babe Almond, Mark Lee, Harry Conner, Walter (Pep) Smith, Alma Montague, Grace Tremont and Olive Ward. The chorus is lively. In addition to the burlesque there will be two olla'bles, "Gentlemen of the Press," with Walter Houston, and "The Office Scandal," with Phyllis Haver, Dick Cosby's orchestra will offer some specialties.

CRASHING THE HOLLYWOOD GATE EASY

By BILLY K. WELLS

Dialogist for "The Cock-Eyed World," Now at B. F. Keith's

WHEN I turned my back on the snow-covered East and 'buttoned up my overcoat,' with apologies to Buddy De Sylva, I murmured the theme song of the Writers' Union, 'I'm on My Way to Hollywood.'

Yes, way back to the early days of my career in vaudeville, and later burlesque, I recalled an old wheeze to the effect 'he is as funny as a red vest.'

"I cashed in on a flaming red vest, because it reached under my neck and hid behind crepe whiskers, making audiences laugh.

And the thought came to me that in comparatively few years I had advanced from the 'vest to the west.' In other words, I was joining the gang from Broadway, to write dialog for Fox Movietone pictures.

"No band at the train to meet me, no cheering crowds, no flowers, no beautiful picture stars to greet me. The only friendly greeting I received was from a fellow Tax guy who called me 'Doc,' and hustled me into a 'seagoing boat,'

'GOLD DIGGER' FACTS TOLD BY DANCER

By ANN PENNINGTON

Star of "The Gold Diggers of Broadway," at the Uptown and Washington St. Olympia

I HAVEN'T met the gold digger who singles out, during her act, a gold-coated "daddy" sitting down front, and gives him the high sign to wait for her.

I haven't met the gold digger who goes out walking with her rich friend and stops at the most expensive French couturier's window display on Fifth Avenue, and wistfully remarks that they're the loveliest things she ever saw in her life and wouldn't it be just too sweet if—

I haven't met the gold digger who drags her new found gold mine into an automobile display store and orders him to drive down in one of the high-priced imported cars, "just for fun."

I haven't met the gold digger who tells her temporary banker, "I look so perfectly wonderful in two-skin sables, it's a shame I can't afford them!" And who tells him it's downright indecent that her taste in togs and desire for distinction should exceed the skimpy few dollars she can spend out of her salary.

CONTINUING its new policy of four features a week, the Modern and Beacon offer for this Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday the all-talking, singing, dancing and partially colored production, "On With the Show," starring Betty Compson, Sally O'Neil, Joe E. Brown and Louise Fazenda. "Paris Bound," with Ann Harding in the star role, will be the accompanying feature for the first four days.

Ann Harding

WHOOPEE GIRL IS GAYETY STAR

LA VILLA MAYE, known as the original "Whoopee Girl," will be the star of "Puss Puss," the Mutual burlesque show, which will open with the usual matinee Monday at the Gayety. An autographed photograph of La Villa Maye will be given to each patron of the show Monday, both at the matinee and at the evening performance. The photographs will be given out at the special midnight show which will be held Friday evening at 11:30, the night before the Columbus Day holiday. The week has been called Auto Dealers' Week at the Gayety.

Charles (Tramp) McNally, Marjie Bartel, Pearl Adams, Marie Ray, Billy Haud, Charles (Rose) Smith, Frank Shean and Larry Clark are other stars of the cast.

Marjie Bartel

BEEF TRUST CHORUS FOR BIG FILM

TWELVE women of generously ample proportions, not one of them weighing less than 180 pounds, got their "break" on the screen when Paramount made the all-talking, all-singing, all-dancing picture, "The Dance of Life," now at the Publix Four, including the Scollay. The "beef-trust" chorus has a composite poundage of 2000, the exact figure demanded by Directors John Cromwell and Edward Sutherland.

The Amazon chorus appears in an opening sequence of "The Dance of Life," in which Hal Skelly and Nancy Carroll are featured. Fred Datig, casting director, says that to find these women was the most difficult assignment he has ever had.

Gordona Bennett and her daughter, Miss La Reno, were the first two to be signed. Miss Bennett has been on the stage since she was three years old. Miss La Reno, for the past three years, has been a member of the chorus in a Los Angeles burlesque show.

The "beef-trust" chorus work appealed to these women as a "lark" and it was on this appeal Director Datig coaxed them back to the limelight.

CHURCH RALLY DAY IN BOSTON TOMORROW

By JOHN PRATT WHITMAN

JEWISH NEW YEAR

Today is the Jewish New Year: their friends, and there are millions, wish them a happy New Year with a satisfactory settlement of Palestine difficulties. In all synagogues and temples today and tomorrow will be held services. Today Rabbi Harry Levi of Temple Israel will preach on "Forward March." For all the holidays the rabbi will give his message twice, first in the Meeting House and a half-hour later at Temple Israel. Among other interesting things happening this year is the organization of a Little Theater movement for the production of plays of Jewish life. Rabbi Levi heads this movement.

METHODISTS RALLY

Edgar Blake in Zion's Herald calls attention to the need for a real and meaningful rally of church schools. He points out the fact that last year while $51,000,000 dollars was spent by Methodism in the United States for pastors and musical services, but $6,000,000 was for Sunday schools, less than six per cent. He writes that "intelligent observers have long recognized the Sunday school as one of the greatest assets of the Christian church."

ETHICAL SOCIETY

"Patriotism and World Peace" is a topic of an address to be given at the Ethical Culture Society tomorrow morning, 294 Huntington ave., by Dr. David S. Muzzey of Columbia University.

COPLEY METHODIST

Why not investigate the D. A. R. when the government is through with Shearer?. That is a question which will be asked tomorrow morning by the Rev. William L. Stidger, who has a strong belief that this patriotic organization was used as a "cat's paw" for said Shearer. Dr. Stidger want's President Hoover to join him in D. A. R. it is true that Shearer flooded the nation with statements branding President Hoover's delay in building cruisers as "unsafe, unwarranted, and unconstitutional," Dr. Stidger will give a dramatic study of the story "All's Quiet on the Western Front."

PRESBYTERIANS

Intensive work in educating the people of the United States in an understanding of internationalism will be carried on by the Presbyterian Church. The foreign board will operate in the East during October and November. A program will begin tomorrow and 2,000,000 Presbyterians will be asked to cooperate.

WINTHROP BAPTIST

Rally day services are to be held with the Rev. Mr. Higginbottom of the Baptist Conference engaged as special speaker. The Rev. William J. Day celebrated last Sunday the anniversary of his 16th year as pastor of this church, and the 40th year of his ministry.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL

"Six Cylinder Love" is the subject for a discussion and descriptive lecture tomorrow evening at the Columbus Avenue Church. This is one of a series in which well known plays and pictures are analyzed. In the morning Dr. Robert Watson will occupy the pulpit in the place of the Rev. Herbert A. Jump.

NATICK CHURCHES

Churches of this town will all preach on the same theme tomorrow morning when they will address their people on "Do We Need the Church?" They will all expect record congregations on account of its being church rally day.

BAPTIST MINISTERS

At Chipman Hall, Monday morning, the Theological Club will provide a program for the Baptist ministers' conference. Special invitation has been extended to all members of the club as well as to all the clergy.

COLLEGE AVE. M. E. CHURCH

The Rev. Lynn J. Radcliffe of the Somerville Methodist Church will address his adult classes after the regular service tomorrow on matter connected with the State House liquor episode when he, with Dr. Robert Watson and Dr. A. S. Conrad, campaigned last year to clean conditions as they conceived them to be. The Rev. Mr. Radcliffe says he has inside convincing matter which did not come out in a hearing where rules of evidence restricted testimony. There are other facts which this pastor affirms he cannot divulge even to his intimate church people because of promises made when the information was given him.

PAYSON PARK CONGREGATIONAL

Rally day in this Belmont church will be observed by the first service to be held in the newly enlarged building. The side walls have been raised. The church room has been increased from a capacity of 400 to 600. The Rev. Lee L. Morgan, a former pastor, will assist the Rev. Mr. Beach in the jubilee service.

BEACON TEMPLE

Rabbi Samuel Abrams will deliver a message tomorrow morning, 9:30, on "To Thy Tents." His New Year's sermon today is on "Facing Life." Large crowds are expected at all of his holiday services, which continue through till Oct. 26, the Feast of Conclusion.

TREMONT ST. METHODIST

The Rev. Edward A. Elliot, superintendent of the Boston Methodist district, will preach tomorrow morning a rally day sermon. In the evening the pastor, the Rev. Charles D. Carroll, will preach on "Spiritual Dynamics. Are You a Live Wire?" There will be a program of special music.

COMMUNITY CHURCH

A third season of the Community Church of Tremont Temple will begin tomorrow morning when the Rev. John Haynes Holmes will preach on "The World Today: What Should Command Our Interest and Allegiance." October's program includes some interesting speakers. The Community Church choir, organ and Mrs. Margaret Gorham Glaser, organist, will furnish a special musical program.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Unreality is the lesson sermon in all churches. Among citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is one from the Bible: "Sing O Daughter of Zion: Shout, O Israel, be glad and rejoice with all thy heart, O daughter of Jerusalem," etc.

LITTLE FLOWER NOVENA

The Thursday novena at St. Stephen's church, the shrine of the "Little Flower" in Boston, will be held in St. John's school hall, 25ooh st., until further notice.

Tue hours of the services are at 12:20, 3:30, 5:30 and 7:45 p. m. The preacher on Thursday, Oct. 10, will be the Rev. Leo F. Logan of St. Stephen's church, Framingham. Fr. Logan will preach at the 5:30 and 7:45 devotions.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

Members of the K. of C. have passed resolutions drawing attention to Columbus Day, and arranging for proper observance. Their announcement is headed by a compelling paragraph:

"Commemorating the most tremendous event in the calendar of momentous happenings that marked the progressive career of our country, namely, the discovery and unfolding to the world of the American Continent, our beloved Columbus wasfaith in 1911 established October 12, Columbus Day, as a legal holiday.

WELLESLEY UNITARIAN

A corner stone laying will take place tomorrow morning immediately after service at the Wellesley Hills Unitarian Church for a new parish house. The Rev. Louis A. Corwich, president of the American Unitarian Association, will deliver the address. He will be followed by Mr. Roger Greely, architect, and one of the directors of the A. U. A. The minister, the Rev. Walter S. Swisher, will also take part.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN

The Rev. Philip Clifford was installed last Thursday evening as successor to Dr. Robert Watson, who resigned to become head of the Lord's Day League.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL

Canon Carnegie from Westminster Abbey will preach in the morning, and Dean Washburn of the Episcopal Theological Seminary in the evening. In the evening the service is one of thanksgiving for St. Francis, who died October 4, 1226.

RADIO PERIOD ESTABLISHED BY CARDINAL

For the first time the Catholics of Boston will conduct a regular radio hour. This will come every Sunday afternoon from 3 to 4.

A program is being arranged by Cardinal O'Connell and by those who have been given responsibilities. WNAC is the station to make the broadcast. Trial programs have been conducted since September 15, but now an offer from the Shepard Stores to the Cardinal has been accepted for an indefinite time. The hour will be divided into periods.

Music, 10 minutes; question box, 12 minutes; musical interlude, 2 minutes; address, 25 minutes; musical finale, 10 minutes.

The Knights of Columbus of Massachusetts, who had been expecting to establish a radio hour for their order, will not now do so, but will co-operate with the one projected by Cardinal O'Connell. A committee in full charge includes: Father John J. Cornyn, S.J.; Rev. M. J. Ahern, S.J.; Mr. Michael J. Jordan, Mr. David Goldstein, Mr. Charles W. Phelan.

Puritans Temperate, Asserts Federation

A document sent to all Protestant ministers in the Commonwealth this week from the Massachusetts Federation of Churches makes a strong plea for "law and order" in connection with the prohibition issue. An article on the matter of drinking states that the Pilgrim fathers were not great drinkers as some have reported, but admired the temperate man. The document concludes with: "Since 1917 the Federation, backed up by all its constituent bodies, has stood for the 18th amendment."

More Interest Is Shown in Ministry

Boston University School of Theology answers the question whether young men are giving up the ministry for other professions by registering this year the largest number of students in the history of the school. All of the various halls set aside for young theologues are filled to capacity.

STATE'S PRISON.

Bishop Slattery will preach at Charlestown prison tomorrow. In the afternoon the bishop will preach at Phillips Academy, in New Hampshire.

Worship

Oh find me a place to sense the unseen.
There's feeling within me must burst out in praise.
Let me fathom my soul for the meaning of life.
Have I duties to hold me or just pleasure to seek?
Am I floating alone on a currentless sea?
Have I nothing to do but dance on the waves?
Is my arm as I stretch it the sum of my strength?
Where find the deep secret that gave prophets their power?
Who sustained the great martyrs to die for their kind?
Can you who make engines or measure the stars
Explain with your numbers the power we call love?
Oh find me a place by the side of the road
Where men kneel in deep yearning
For truth that will last.
From somewhere there comes to those hungry and parched
A mystical answer with spiritual strength.

FINE POINTS OF MODERN HOMES

By BETTY BONNELL

It was raining pitchforks that afternoon when I was visiting Grace. Just one of those days when it's nice to curl up on the sofa and make yourself comfortable.

But after a half hour or so, it struck me as rather odd that Grace's two youngsters were nowhere to be seen, not even the faintest sound of them. Surely, on all this rain they must be somewhere at least in the house.

Betty Bonnell

Grace answered my question with a laugh and beckoned me to the rear of the house where we got under an umbrella and made for the garage. But instead of going right into the front, I followed her along a little walk that ended up before a quaint little doorway on the side.

I refrain to ask no further questions to learn that there was a complete little playhouse built right against the side of the garage, for it took no amplifiers to hear that medley of children's voices that greeted us as we opened the door.

With two little girls and another boy recruited from neighboring houses, there was no telling how of them having the time of their lives in the cutest little playhouse you ever laid eyes on. The whole business is 6 feet wide by 10 feet long, and comes from a manufacturing concern in complete sections which are put together and attached to the garage by special devices in one separate unit.

The studs and siding are carefully dried to keep out dampness and vermin and there is a wooden floor. The furniture, such as chairs and table, are all of miniature size and fold right up against the wall when not in use, so that children can have the complete floor space to play on. Besides it's easier to clean.

And then the outside, it's as pretty as a picture. I noticed a lovely pergola roof, a flower box below the side windows, and shutters on both side and front windows. The whole business is painting from the rear side comes all in one piece.

Of course if father insists, it's easy enough to make this some extra garage wing serve as a tool house or workshop as per the purpose, though, there will be times when he and the children will want to use it for the latter purpose.

If you want to avoid family conflicts, I insist that you give the offspring first preference in the making it entirely a playhouse and let dad use his ingenuity in the erection of some other place in the basement or the garage proper where he can putter around to heart's content.

INTERESTING ENGLISH TYPE HOME
By National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc.

THIS attractive home (A 194) possesses just a few touches of the modernistic art, not enough, however, to seriously separate it from its English prototypes.

The front gable is interesting. The stone wall sweeping low to the ground, and the pattern on the first floor of omitting the usual design out and applied in the batten shutters and painted black.

The pigeon house up in the main gable, the hood over the kitchen windows and the picket detail are all worthy of note.

The side walls are of white stucco on roughed finish with the exception of the front wall of the sun porch which is stone and the gable ends are of stucco with boards stained weathered gray. The roof is shingled in various shades of red.

A study of the plan reveals a well arranged layout. The sun porch and dining room are practically one long room. The dining alcove and kitchen are convenient and compact. Two bed rooms and a bath are provided on the second floor. The basement contains a garage for one car, a laundry and a heating plant.

There are two and one-half baths in the house and three small bedrooms could be finished in the attic if desired.

The cubic contents of the house, according to the figures provided by the architect, is 21,000 cubic feet and the cost approximately $11,300 to build.

COMPLETE working plans and specifications of the house illustrated above may be obtained for a nominal cost from the National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc. Any technical questions regarding this house will be answered without cost or obligation. Quincy Firm Will Raze Newport Navy Station

The formal award of the contract by the Navy Department for the dismantling of the barracks, warehouses, powder plants, boat houses, swimming pools, railroad lines and shipping lines was received yesterday by L. Grossman Sons, Inc., who were low bidders when the proposals were made about a month ago.

L. Grossman Sons, Inc. are to commence operations at once, Stanley J. Baran of Quincy, who has for many years been chief superintendent at Grossman's plant, will be in charge. Mr. Baran also supervised the dismantling project at Chatham.

Mr. Grossman at that station in 1923.

He has left for Newport with a large crew of local men, and is to engage a number of others to assist him. Approximately 75 buildings, containing over 3,000,000 feet of lumber, several thousand windows, doors and radiators are to go down. There are 18 large steam boilers, any one of which is capable of heating a good sized apartment house. There is more than ten miles of pipe and some five miles of railroad siding. There is a large base manufacturing plant and refrigeration plant large enough to supply the demands of a small city.

The Grossman firm has also received the Hingham Naval Training Station, Pumpkin Island, Coddington Point in 1925 and the Naval Air Station at Chatham.

These exhibitions of what our highly skilled workers can do have proven highly successful in past years. Many thousands of persons, those in attendance invariably listened to scores of authoritative speakers on subjects of industry and finance. Prominent men have come to Boston from all parts of the country. The result of their visits is to bring Boston and New England even more widely known and even more popular. Made to Massachusetts stands for excellence.

At the New Haven's reclamation plant in Framingham yesterday we noticed a sign, "Don't Get Hurt." This might be equally adaptable to the users of the big stock exchanges.

Educational program of the Boston Elevated this season is expected to be featured by assignment of a certain amount of theoretical capital which will be invested theoretically by the students. The expenses will be studied as a part of the course. The same idea has been interestingly tried at Wellesley and other colleges, we believe.

Otto Paschles, president of the Polymet Manufacturing Corporation, is sailing on the Ile-de-France for an extended tour of England and the Continent. While away Mr. Paschles will devote considerable attention to business in the current field and will make a thorough survey and inspection of the corporation's foreign connections with a view toward further extending this phase of its business. Current foreign business of the corporation, which is the largest manufacturer of radio parts and essentials in the world, is running at a rate three times that of a year ago.

Referring to facts commented on in this column yesterday, Dun's says in further detail: "Hide prices are about the same as a month ago, the low point for the year, but are about the same amount below the equivalent a year ago. Output of Shoe production continues in the same volume, though the August figures were somewhat disappointing. The New England shoe concerns report sales for August 8 per cent below those for August, 1928, for the year to the end of August, they are 3 per cent behind last year."

"The sole leather situation is improving, with stocks on hand declining and prices stabilized. Boston department store sales showed a gain of 7 per cent during August. For the year to the end of August New England department stores have made a gain of 2 per cent in their sales. August records showed a big increase in the glove trade, and the ready-to-wear departments also are showing up well.

"The requirements of the New England shipping for December, November and December in almost all lines for freight rate indicate decreased production ranging as high as 40 per cent. Cement shipments show a gain of 25 per cent in the production of lime and plaster and scrap metals; in brass, bronze and copper, iron and steel, machinery and petroleum products; and a 10 per cent increase in boots and shoes, coal and coke, electrical machinery and plumbers' supplies."

PLANS NEW COLONIES

A plan to intensively colonize certain sections of Nova Scotia is under consideration by the Canadian Pacific Railway, the Department of Commerce learns from Trade Commissioner E. G. Sabine, Montreal, in a report to the Department of Commerce. The commissioner of the railway's colonization department announced the putting into effect of a campaign for the settlement of British and Danish farmers in Nova Scotia, to be undertaken in conjunction with the Provincial Department of Natural Resources.

GERMAN BATTERIES GAIN

During the first six months of 1929 German storage battery exports reached a record figure of 3,084 tons, having a value of 5,800,000 Reichsmarks (about $1,392,000), as compared to 2,310 tons during the corresponding period of the previous year, and 1,907 tons during the first half of 1927, according to a report from Trade Commissioner James E. Wallis, Jr., Berlin, Germany, to the Department of Commerce.

STOCKS STRONG IN WALL ST. COMEBACK

New York, Oct. 5 (AP)—Strong buying support developed in the day's stock market, and prices staged a brisk recovery, active issues rising 2 to 20 points, while a few high grade specialties soared 12 to nearly 40 points. Trading was in heavy volume with the ticker showing an average delay of about 18 minutes behind the tape.

The sharp rally indicated the completion, at least temporarily, of forced liquidation, which had undermined the market earlier in the day and indicated that general business had not been affected by the decline in stock values, and that operations of the basic industries were proceeding in full volume.

Heavy liquidation in the past week also is believed to have created a large volume of immediate purchasing power. Call money dropped from 10 to 6 per cent this week and loans in the outside market were available Friday as low as 5½.

American Tobacco issues were the spectacular features, the B stock soaring nearly 40 points and the A 28 on the announcement of an increase in cigarette prices. Liggett & Myers common jumped 10 points each, and Lorillard Tobacco 7.

Columbian Carbon jumped 28 points, Motor Products 10 and General Electric extended its gain to 9. A. M. Byers, American Water Works, Westinghouse Electric, American Machine & Foundry, Delaware & Hudson, United Aircraft, National Biscuit, Electric Auto Lite, American Telephone, Air reduction, Western Union and Johnson extended their gains 14 points or more. Scores of others added 2 to 5 points above yesterday's final quotations.

AMSTER RAPS HEDLEY ACTION

New York, Oct. 5 - Interpreting the refusal of Frank Hedley, president of the Interborough Rapid Transit Co. to provide a list of the holders of voting trust certificates without first obtaining permission of the holders as an "attack on the company's own stockholders," Adolph L. Amster, chairman of the stockholders' protective committee of the Manhattan Elevated Co., intimated that the voting trust certificate holders would make a determined effort to break the control of Mr. Hedley and James J. Hoey, receiver for the L. R. T. policy.

"We have sought no fight," Mr. Amster said in a statement to the newspapers. "I have sought peace while our rights were being made a football of by the Interborough that has attacked its own stockholders. And this is not the finish."

Mr. Amster criticized Hedley for making public correspondence concerning the former's request for a list of the holders of the voting trust certificates.

Bond Redemptions for Month Lower

Bond redemptions in October are not only about $50,100,000 lower than October last year, but the smallest monthly since March, 1924. Corporation bonds and notes called in September, and $109,321,230 in October, 1928. Of the total $16,000,000 was called in full and $75,179,400 in part, generally to satisfy sinking fund requirements.

Total of $656,000,750 in 10 months takes fifth place, against fourth place for nine months with more than $1,000,000,000 below the 10 months' record of $1,725,308,920 in 1926. Highest was that of $1,244,621,850 in 1927 and corresponding totals for 1928 and 1925.

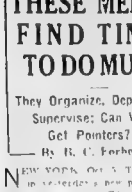
THESE MEN FIND TIME TO DO MUCH

They Organize, Deputize, Supervise; Can We Get Pointers?

— By R. C. Forbes —

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Two item in yesterday's new papers



R. C. Forbes

Cleveland, Ohio.—Robert W. Woodruff president of the Coca-Cola Company of Atlanta, was today elected president of the White Motor Company, succeeding the late Walter C. White. Mr. Woodruff already has one big job on his hands, but it seems he is willing to assume additional responsibilities.

New York Matthew S. Sloan, president of the New York Edison Company, was chosen last night chairman of an organization to raise $6,000,000 to build the Gotham Hospital for patients of moderate means.

* * *

Why is it that some men make time to undertake many responsibilities while others find it difficult to fill one job?

In part of the explanation to be found in the late Judge Garv's guiding business axiom: "Organize, deputize, supervise."

Many men handicap themselves by their failure to deputize. They feel they must do everything themselves. They cannot bring themselves to leave important matters to others. Being nominally responsible they cannot entirely trust, and so neglect or overdo or do wrong.

That is the attitude sometimes of executive personnel. Hard as counsel may imagine nobody can do anything but exactly right except themselves. Sometimes it is the attitude of men gripped in an inferiority complex. They feel more or less anxious that they will fall down on the job unless all responsibility grows heavily upon them; are in the answer to guard against mishaps, and shirk from deputizing responsibilities.

* * *

Thomas W. Lamont, the foremost of J. P. Morgan & partners, can keep half a dozen tremendously important balls in the air at one time. One hour he may be devoting himself wholeheartedly to raising $11,000,000 for Harvard; the next he may be wrestling with the problem of solving Mexico's foreign debt tangle, from that he may turn to the organization of a billion-dollar combination; a $50,000,000 or $100,000,000 security issue may be the next item on his program. Lamont functions quickly and, he declares, with unusually little wear and tear on himself.

* * *

At the other side of the continent is a banker who finds time to become an active factor in scores of diversified enterprises. Herbert Fleishhacker of San Francisco. He will settle a dozen knotty problems for different corporations in half as many hours. They tell you in California that everybody takes their troubles to him. There is hardly a field of human endeavor that he is not prime a in

* * *

Owen D. Young, the chief executive officer of General Electric because, when its chief counsel he found time to organize and to help every executive and manager who was confronted with a baffling difficulty. Mr. Young is today a dynamic force in several huge-scale enterprises here and abroad, yet finds time to draw up Germany's reparation plan.

Myron C. Taylor, Judge Gary's successor in the Steel Corporation, has achieved a notable record in several lines of industry as well as in finance. The Morrow Brothers, who have taken hold of United Cigars, Gold Dust, etc., apparently are never too busy to tackle the upbuilding of one more enterprise.

Sydney Z. Mitchell has made Iona in the fire than perhaps any other man in America. He has learned how to organize, deputize and supervise and to do each thoroughgoingly. Samuel Insull of Chicago has also tackled one big task after another and licked them all.

Charles Hayden, of Hayden-Stone is among the most ubiquitous men in Wall Street, an active power in a bewildering variety of organizations. George F. Baker, when younger, knew almost as much about the affairs of the score or more railways and industrial corporations of which he was a director as he did about his own bank. Coleman duPont before his health gave way, mastered an extraordinary diversity of industries and made money in each.

The Van Sweringens have learned the art of attending to more than one thing. John D. Ryan and Cornelius F. Kelley originally of Anaconda Copper, have branched out enormously. William R. Hearst has exhibited extraordinary versatility. So has Pierre duPont, also Fred Fisher.

* * *

The number of towering business executives who find time to devote to philanthropic and other worthy, non-mercenary movements is amazing.

* * *

To the axiom, "Organize, deputize, supervise," should be added, "Avoid ruts, work enthusiastically, play enthusiastically."

Slovakian Leader Sentenced to Prison

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Oct. 5 (AP)—Prof. Vojtech Tuka, prominent Slovakian leader, today was sentenced to 15 years imprisonment for high treason.

During his trial in July he declared he had done nothing against the Czechoslovak republic or its citizens, and that his activities had been purely confined to work for internal policies. He asserted the real charge was not treason, but that he had demanded autonomy for Slovakia.

Orders Concord Jail Graveyard Repairs

Commissioner A. Warren Stearns today ordered the superintendent of the Concord Reformatory to take steps to improve conditions at the prisoners' graveyard there.

The order is the result of complaints to the Governor's office that the fence surrounding the burying place is dilapidated, the crosses are neglected and the plot is an eyesore.

Age for Marriage a Moot Question

Editor Boston American:

What a the best age for a woman to marry, 30 or 25? Would you like to live in India where there are 218,000 wives and 15,000 widows under five years old?

This is not the whole number but it is quoted from the lips of a missionary who spoke last week in Boston.

A party of young people recently debated the question and these was more than one in their opinions. Three-fourths of them asserted that there should be no age limit in marriage. Do you think that true love knows no limit in age?

Housekeeper Laments Passing of Home Cooking

Editor Boston American:

A member of the Housekeeper's League said to me the other day that there is less home cooking going on in the modern homes. Restaurants, delicatessen stores and food centers are using more gas than ever before, and home stoves are using less.

This is a great mistake. Every young woman should be interested in home cooking. There are fewer women today who can make good bread than 25 years ago. They do not want the trouble of making it. This is not true of the country young woman, who is really forced to learn home cooking. She can make better bread than the city girl.

Today restaurants in a certain city are using 196 per cent more gas, laundries 116 per cent more and delicatessen stores 138 per cent. Why, because home cooking is declining.

Sees Emancipated Woman Bullying Men

Editor Boston American:

Are the women bullying the men?

They certainly are. Since they have had the vote and other privileges they are showing their hand not only in politics of a local nature, but they are pushing hard to influence senators and representatives in Washington. They are becoming the most astute lobbyists. They used to have some hesitancy about seeking men on external questions, but now they are bold and insistent.

Some men are beginning to feel their weakness more keenly as they view the methods of the modern woman. There are 36 women preachers today in Massachusetts. No man dares to sit in a pew when some of these women preachers are holding forth. The tender, smooth, generous ways of a woman talking, the memories of the past. They present truth so piercingly that many men would rather have hysterics than veer from the right way. They make prohibition a standing monument to their zeal. There is no doubt in my mind man is becoming a back number.

North Pole Real Estate May Be Good Investment

Editor Boston American:

Buy real estate at the North Pole! Weather prophets in several parts of the world are saying that the earth will eventually become so hot that all its inhabitants will be forced to migrate to the North Pole, or, if more convenient, to the South Pole.

A professor in Sweden is promoting this idea and it has made a great hit with some people.

A Kiss for Corinna

By MAY CHRISTIE

A Romance of Love of a Girl and a Rich Man

CHAPTER VI

"VAN WYCK got that fellow Jenson fired because he claimed he was fresh with her. Jenson was one of our best boys . . . and we were all ready to go on strike. But that did not matter to Jul . . . he came to the aid of the rich people."

This was too true.

Now the girls in the Fifth avenue beauty parlor were all fond of Corinna. They didn't want to see her in trouble with the boss. They didn't want to lose her.

"I'd take the Van Wyck cat and glad to oblige you, but SHE'D be mighty offended and simply make your job too hot to hold you." This from a young woman whom Corinna had helped out of many a difficulty.

"What's this?" What's the confounded?" Julian himself pushed open the swing door of the booth to which the operators were attending.

Corinna wasn't afraid of him. With that regal tilt to her pretty head, her Irish blue eyes spooling with anger, she answered:

"I want someone else to take Miss Van Wyck when she comes in today."

"How's that? Got another customer?" He barked the words out at her.

"No."

"Then what in thunder . . ." The nostrils of his small pug nose were inflated with anger.

Corinna flushed. The other operators had scurried off at the boss' advent. She said, a little quiver in her voice: "I don't care to wait on her."

"Don't care?" he mimicked her. "This is a business firm, and not a cats' tea party! Who do you think you are, to start this Bolshevistic talk? What's the big idea?" He glared at her. "Where'ud I be where'ud anybody be with these high hat, choosey ideas of serving the customers? You tell me that?"

She did not answer.

Now listen here, my girl. You climb down from your perch, or it'll go badly with you. Miss Van Wyck's brought me some of my best trade, and who offends her goes . . . no matter what's the right or wrong of it. Get that straight. And remember you're a working girl. And she could buy and sell you a thousand times a minute. So you'll be civil to her. And if I hear anything to the contrary, there'll be trouble . . .

• • •

Back in her own booth, and tidying it with shaking hands, Corinna told herself:

"I was a fool. The girls were right. I'll only lose my job if I refuse to serve her."

Summer was coming on. It would be next to impossible to get another position. At least, never one of that high-class caliber.

Hadn't she earned $60 weekly on an average, working in the shop in the past months? And a good $50 were coming to her for her anchets and other bits of needlework?

Wasn't her mother far from strong, and badly needing her daughter's financial assistance? What would happen to her mother if she should now lose her excellent job in Julian's?

So Corinna—although smarting from the boss's sharp rebuke, and hating the very thought of having to tend the predatory Van Wyck woman—wisely forced herself to get the right perspective on the situation.

But she wouldn't know-how to Denise Van Wyck. Oh, no, indeed!

And she wouldn't let her ever be reminded in the least about the incidents of the recent ball, when Denise had practically kidnaped Mahew.

Pretend she hadn't noticed anything. Gloat her own good time her own success, quite in the Van Wyck manner.

That was the only possible attitude!

• • •

"So we meet again?" said her blonde customer with what was meant to be a good-natured quirk of her over-plucked eyebrows, as she sank into the chair in Corinna's booth and regarded herself in the mirror. "When I saw you the other night at the ball, you could have knocked me down with a feather!"

Greeted Corinna with equal nonchalance: "Really? I thought I told you I went out quite a bit in the evenings."

Denise wanted to ask "With the same man?" but expediency stopped her. Such a question might bring information of a sort she didn't wish to hear . . . might evolve a situation that would be awkward to handle.

And why antagonize the girl? She still had sense to realize Craig might influence him against her.

Better — much better — to be friendly.

"You certainly made a great hit with my cousin Mortimer. He's got shoals of girls after him, too so you ought to feel flattered. He's very particular."

"Both he and Mr. van Tuyl were extremely nice to me," ventured Corinna. At that moment Monsieur Julian came into the booth.

He was all ap'ogies, because they were out of the special French champoo Miss Van Wyck had requisitioned for this morning—he'd just had word that a fresh supply was arriving in three days' time on the 'Gigantic'—meantime would something else do?

"Oh, that's all right," said Denise good-naturedly. "I'll have a manicure now, and will make an appointment for a shampoo on Friday, when the new stuf' arrives."

Thanking her profusely, and with a severely warning glance at Corinna

MALAGA FREED ON BAIL, REARRESTED IN SLAVE CASE

Wealthy Boston Woman Is Sued for $500,000

BIG BAIL FOR REINSTEIN SUSPECT

Girl "Key Witness" in Slavery Murders is on Her Way to Boston

Harry Malaga of K[illegible] Pl[illegible] prosecution with the [illegible] of Samuel Reinstein, [illegible] signed $2000 bail and was released from custody only to be rearrested on federal authority.

He was arraigned before [illegible] Michael J. Creed in Municipal Court charged with denying support from a white slave, namely Betty Martin, also of Easton, now held in $5000 by the federal court.

Malaga, who police say was the driver of the car in which Reinstein was "put on the spot," a few days before the killing, pleaded not guilty and the case was continued to Oct. 11.

Judge Creed imposed bail of $5000 and bonds were put up by a surety company.

Immediately on [illegible] Malaga was arrested by Deputy U. S. Marshal Joseph Winston on a federal warrant charging violation of the Mann Act. He was taken to Federal court for arraignment before U. S. Commissioner Edwin C. Jones.

He pleaded not guilty on examination and was held [illegible] presentment [illegible] a Federal grand jury. Bail was furnished by the same New York concern that bailed him out.

A special agent was sent to Boston to handle the case.

Asst. U. S. Atty John W. Schenck warned Malaga that if he leaves the State heforfeits his bond, and asked him to relay that information to Betty Martin.

Inspector Timothy Dowling received a telegram from New London, alias "Jackie, the Red Head," announcing she was on her way to Boston from Pennsylvania.

The girl, who was the sweetheart of Eddie "Duke" Neuman, whose slaying in New York resulted in the Boston killing of Reinstein, is said to be a key witness in four murders.

On her arrival she will be questioned by Dist. Atty. William J. Foley and his chief assistant Frederick T. Doyle and probably by the federal authorities.

"Jackie" was a dancer in the Fare Line Hotel at Palmerton Pa. where the trouble between Reinstein and Eddie Neuman started last November. Her associate was a relative of "Abe" Reggi who with Max Kessler, Chicago gangster, is sought in connection with the Neuman murder. The killing was [illegible] had at the door of Reinstein and he was [illegible] sentence.

FLIGHT'S AUTHORITIES

Authorities consider the girl a most important witness and were elated over her decision to come here and talk. Inspector Doyle made a contact with the girl when he was in Pennsylvania and understood he persuaded her to make the trip to Boston.

The arrest of the Department of Justice agents working here were today centering their efforts on a search for two women and a man [illegible] in the Boston vice ring who have thus far evaded capture. It is understood, however, that they will be picked up shortly, and their apprehension will considerably strengthen the case which the government forces are building against the vice ring.

Five agents are also busy in Rhode Island investigating the extent in which lavish drinks are involved in the transportation of women.

FUNNY, how quickly one forgets. We park the A's on top of the Cubs and immediately the Mackmen become 7 to 5 favorites. Now that's wrong, for in a seven-game series if ever there is a case for hard work it proves the winner for any logical reason would be the team of Connie Mack to run and make him like it. It is an even money proposition, especially for the players. The winning player will get an even $6000.

Mrs. Pressler Trails Miss Collett at Turn in Match

GLENNA 1 UP AT 18TH IN TITLE GOLF

OAKLAND HILLS COUNTRY CLUB, Birmingham Mich., Oct. 5 (AP)—Glenna Collett of Pebble Beach, Cal., seeking her fourth national women's golf championship, was 1 up one Mrs. Leona Pressler of Los Angeles at the end of 18 holes in their 36-hole championship match here today.

Miss Collett, seeking to break all women's golf records by winning her fourth championship, won three holes of the first nine with bogie fours, dropped one to a par and halved the others. She scored a 38, three under par, for the trip, as compared to Mrs. Pressler's 40.

The champion was steadier than her rival on the greens and outdrove her consistently. Mrs. Pressler, however, was not affected and was playing steadily.

A gallery of 2000 watched the match. The weather was ideal.

Glenna scored a birdie four on the 342-yard seventh and went 2 up again. They halved the eighth in par 5. They halved the ninth with a bogie threes and Glenna rounded the quarter turn 2 up.

Their cards:

Par, out	5	3	5	3	5	5	3	5	4	—41
Collett, out	4	4	2	5	6	4	4	5	3	—38
Pressler, out	5	5	3	5	6	4	5	5	3	—40

Mrs. Pressler missed her second putt, a two-footer on the 424-yard tenth and was forced to take a half with a par, one over par. Glenna three putted the 11th green from 20 feet and lost the hole, getting a par to Mrs. Pressler's shaky 6, one over. They halved the 526-yard 12th with bogie fours and Glenna remained 1 up.

Mrs. Pressler squared the match for the first time in the short, tree bound 13th. She hit the carpet with her putt and sank it from 10 feet for a birdie 2. The long 14th was halved in par 5. Both three putted the 15th, but halved it with par 5s and the deadlock remained.

A remarkable 130-yard mashie shot over a bad water hole to within a foot of the cup gave Mrs. Pressler an eagle 3 on the 357-yard 16th, but Glenna thrilled the gallery and displayed her nerve by calmly sinking her first putt, a 35-footer, to match it and stay square.

They halved the short 17th with poor fours and still were tied.

Glenna went to lunch one up, however, by bagging a bogie four on the 486-yard 18th. She was on in two and in with two putts, while Mrs. Pressler was short with her second, on with her third and then took the conventional two putts.

Their cards:

Par—In	5	4	6	3	5	5	3	5	4	—41—82
Collett—
In	6	6	5	3	5	5	3	4	4	—41—79
Pressler—
In	6	5	5	2	5	5	3	4	5	—40—80

Miss Collett gained a 2-up lead on the first nine holes by making the journey in 38 strokes, three under par, as compared to Mrs. Pressler's 40, but was outplayed coming back.

Mrs. Pressler squared the match on the 13th green by scoring a birdie 2. They halved the succeeding four holes with three pars and an eagle, but Glenna, who is out to write golf history by capturing her fourth national crown, wedged into a 1-up lead by bagging a birdie 4 on the 340-yard hole, a 166-yard carry. The champion otherwise was outplayed coming home setting a par 41 to the challenger's 40.

Mrs. Pressler to-ed away gold en opportunities to gain a good lead this morning by not putting on three greens, she looked certain to win, only to lose her chance by taking three putts from comparatively easy distances.

Young Lefty and Holmes to Battle

Matchmaker Sam Pries of the Dime-a-flight-club of Fall River arranged an excellent fighting card for Monday night. Besides the main bout of eight rounds between these two bitter rivals, Young Lefty of Fall River and Eddie Holmes of Providence, there will be a six-round event between Joe Sheehan, Jack Sharkey's 160-pound heavyweight protege, and Pat McLaughlin of Newport. Sharkey will be at the ringside to lend Vincha some advice.

Tufts Opens Season With Colby at Medford Today

THE Tufts grid team open their season against Colby this afternoon on the latter's home field.

The squad arrived in Waterville this morning after a short trip from Augusta, where the team last night.

Arthur Sampson is rather noncommittal as to the outcome of this afternoon's game. The men are somewhat hampered by injuries, and are not in the best of shape to start the season, while the rain of this last week cut into the outlined program to a considerable extent, necessitating the omitting of the expected drills against the yearling aggregation.

The loss of Littleton and Ruggeiro has upset the Jumbo leaders' plans, although both men are with the team and will be in uniform. There is a possibility that both men will be in the lineup at the opening whistle.

Attractive List of Schoolboy Games Carded Today

40 ELEVENS WILL MEET TODAY

TODAY'S scholastic football program is one of the most attractive ones for gridden the hearts of the fans with follow the doings of the youthful eleven. In the 40 or more contests today there are so many fine teams pitted against one another that it is difficult to decide which struggle claims major attention.

For those who care to witness a hard game, the Everett-Ridge clash at Russell Field, is recommended. The Jewish holiday has enabled Everett to get together its left tackle and Stein and Rich end, giving Smith will field along unscathed. Both Mc- and Ridge should be strengthened at the post.

Jack Mahan, Everett's mighty little quarter, and John Dell, captain and fullback of the Red eleven are out in the best of condition. McLaren is filling with a sprained ankle, but will be in the fray. These two combine to make a powerful aggregation. Ridge has an outside chance to win. Everett looks like the probable victor, however.

MEDFORD AT FITCHBURG

Medford high's scoring football machine, well-oiled and with Lawrence Spellman setting in the right tackle spot, should have little trouble in defeating Fitchburg. The latter team won from Worcester South and Worcester north in its first two games of the season but in neither victory today would it seem stronger than any hereto-fore played.

Quincy-Adams Allen is doing fine work for Fitchburg, which has only three lettermen from last year. Another thing that will help it would be a passing game.

Cambridge Latin has played two games this season, losing to B. C. high and Salem. Coach MacDonald would like to see both Dan Foley, Newton's Newton boys, Dugan, Mucilo and Lebedzinski show speed in the Open-field work. He has a fine set of linemen in the line and has a wonderful defensive back in Perry, Elsworth and Sullivan.

Waltham and Somerville will fill the atmosphere over Tuftes Field Somerville with its fleet backfield and passing under Coach Lewis of Waltham has had success with the second team and will have Somerville ready for the fray to a win over Champion of the Valley league. Saturday Coach George Mirth and Pennsylvania in the Watch City backfield.

PENDERGAST DANGEROUS

Pendergast is a dangerous threat to any team's hopes when he wraps his 150 pounds around the ball. Martin of Somerville has displayed a clever brand of football in his Somerville backfield while Wallace should be set at right half. Wallace running the team capably. Waltham should be set for a hard fracture the game should be very close.

Team of Malden should well will play against Haverhill tonight, while one Maxwell forward in the latter team is a triple threat man. Lad- and Sargent will have charge Malden. Ryan, Thompson, Hall and Tam Thompson should supply the backfield. Haverhill has a fine team this season but Malden has the edge on the strength of the Essex New Year's Day.

The Purple should be able to beat Malden without trouble. Malden is probably better than the score indicates, as it was defeated by Lynn English High, Lynn Classical, Everett and Haverhill and is expected to be strong. Haverhill is carrying five Officers and Pyrnski, supported by the whole Malden.

North Shore fans are either the event of the Peabody-Beverly game at Peabody, the North Shore stronghold. Peabody has won one and lost one, and has defeated Elliot, Pattenagle and Marblehead. Classical is expected to be strong at Fallon, quarterback, is expected to step in Rockland's shoes after last Saturday. Chamberlain will be his place with Kendricks, Lucas and Hodgkins ready to do their share of the day's work.

B. C. H. VS. FAIRHAVEN

B. C. high's undefeated eleven, with a fine line worthy of the smaller colleges, and a strong backfield composed of Captain Stapleton and Crouch, journeys to Fairhaven today. It is to play the team which defeated Brockton high last week. It obtained as another triumph for the Maroon and Gold.

One of the poorest school grounds has passed at Woburn and in its stead is a new field which will be the scene of a good game between Watertown and Woburn this afternoon. Like the field, Woburn's team is new, only two veterans, Capt. Johnson and Leo Cassell, returning this year.

Coach Barry has done well with green material and hopes to get out on a trail of victories today. Watertown bowed to Waltham last week but its backs, Johnson, Pickett, Lane and Farmer, will find the going easier against Woburn. Watertown is a slight favorite to come through victorious.

WINTER LEAGUE ON COAST

Plans have been announced by secretary George Putnam of the San Francisco club of the Pacific Coast league for a baseball winter league to be sponsored by three Coast magnates. The league is to be a regular schedule with double-headers on Sundays and one each week in each town. The purpose of the league is to develop young players for the major teams and any holding such organization.

Oakland is to back two of the clubs and San Francisco and the Missions one each. An effort will be made to get a Class D rating for the league with some special provisions to cover on that the players may be under lease to the sponsor club without inflating the player limit.

Winter ball is played considerably on the Coast, and the owners of the three clubs see a chance to look over young players and develop them for their Class AA teams.

JACK SHARKEY TO UMPIRE

Jack Sharkey, recent conqueror of Tommy Loughran and recognized as the world's heavyweight champion, will try his hand at baseball umpiring tomorrow afternoon, when he will work on the bases in the game between Roslindale 1929 Twilight League champions and the old North Cambridge team, champions of the "Tail" flag, at Russell Field, North Cambridge.

Jesse Cauteran, Warren Cleary, Frank Sullivan, Frank McGeehan, Sonny Foley, Dan Leahy, Bill Cleary, Henry Quinn, Jay O'Connor, Eddie Gill, Jimmy Fitzgerald, "Tubby" Cronin, they will all be together again to test their ability against the most recent "Twi champs.

ADVISES GIRLS AGAINST LOSING SUMMER TAN

Jeritza Warns Against Strong Face Bleaches

By MARIA JERITZA

AT this time of year I am besieged with letters asking how to banish freckles, tan and sunburn, and bleach the skin to its former fairness and smoothness. This fall, however, there have been fewer of these bleaching letters than usual, because it happens that tan remains fashionable, and the woman lucky enough to possess a rich, even coat of tan is not eager to lose it.

My suggestion would be, keep your tan as long as you can. That should not be difficult, for of late years mild weather has extended late into the autumn, so that a sun bath is quite practical on a late October or Indian summer's day. Moreover, the sun at this time of year is mild and invigorating without being hot enough to be a menace to your health. A late fall coat of sun-tan, acquired by lounging about in a sleeveless frock on warm days in sunlight, plus an added coat due to a short mid-winter vacation in the sunny South, if that is possible for you, should coax your rich brown complexion to remain with you until next spring, and it will never look more stunning with the cool shades of blue, brown and yellow that are so fashionable this fall. Of course the right shade of powder will accentuate and deepen the tint of your skin.

The girl who freckles, however, has not a certain remedy to do away with all disfigurative scheme of coloring. Her lovely blondeness and velvety-soft texture should be the chief claim to distinction. You will find that right beautiful women of the type that freckles have protected their delicate complexions from ravages of the sun this summer, and will continue to do so regardless of the fad for a deep brown skin. And in selecting powder and other cosmetics surely you remain true to their natural type, which is luminous for them, and will merely help Mother Nature perfect for them her own scheme of beauty and exquisite coloring.

An extreme case of freckles is injurious to the skin and dyes it as it is painful. Freckles, also, give a sun-burned, outdoor look, are not to be encouraged.

So my counsel is get rid of your freckles and tan, but not by means of a violent bleach, but of a natural, gradual process of a bleaching. And resolve to begin now to guard against more freckles and sunburn.

There are many pretty fads and fashions to help you in your campaign against the ravages of the rays of the sun, the nose veil, the beach umbrella, trimmed with a beach hat, gloves in the fall and winter, sleeves of some sort at all season such as the following which sound harm the most delicate skin.

Fresh lemon juice, one table spoonful; fresh cream, one tablespoonful; cream of milk, one tablespoonful.

Mix these two ingredients well just before using the bleach. Also rub the mixture well at night and rub this lotion wherever there are freckles rubbing it into your skin gently. Leave on these ingredients, then wash it off with lukewarm suds, and a cool rinse, my favorite one is a pat of mutton tallow cold cream to sink in for each night.

Do not expect immediate results. All remedies are drying and irritating to the skin, so you cannot afford to risk the beauty of your skin texture with strong, quick acting bleaches and lotions.

Your beauty is the result of your good health plus the sensible, simple, natural care you give your body and your grooming and your wholesome outlook on life. If you should follow a sensible health regimen and keep your health perfect, your loveliness should always be that perfect itself as the years pass.

THAT APPETIZING CHILL

THERE are chills and chills. No woman likes to have another person chill her with a look or a few caustic words, but the chill that comes from eating a cold, refreshing dessert on a torrid day is quite something else again—a thing almost too welcome to express in words. Everyone goes in for cold desserts or frozen desserts, even in the balmy days of fall and winter the cold dessert remains in vogue, whether it be for the family meal or one of the many parties which come along at that time.

For afternoon teas, the sherbet is the accepted dessert. But just any sherbet won't do; there must be something just a little unusual about it something to give a filip and for the buffet supper party start with Halloween and continue until after New Year's, there are any number of really scrumptious desserts which can be made ahead of time and put in the refrigerator to keep cool until the important time comes to serve them to appreciative guests.

Here are recipes which follow are planned for eight persons and were originated and have been tested by Martha Lee.

CHERRY ICE. Press the juice and flesh from three-fourths of a can of red pitted cherries through a sieve. Boil three-fourths cup sugar, one and one-half cups water and three tablespoons corn syrup until the syrup threads, then pour it slowly over one stiffly beaten egg white. Add three tablespoons of lemon juice, two tablespoons of maraschino cherry juice and the mashed cherries. Freeze as any ice cream.

FROZEN RASPBERRIES: Mash the fruit from a can of red raspberries and remix with the syrup discarding none of the pulpy part. Add the juice of one lemon, one-half cup of sugar and one and one-half cups of water and bring to boiling to melt the sugar. Cool. Freeze, using three parts ice to one part salt.

COFFEE COCOANUT CREAM: Soak three-fourth tablespoon gelatin in cold water. Make a custard of one egg yolk, one-half cup of brown sugar and three-fourths cup strong hot coffee. Add one teaspoon butter, pour over the gelatin and stir until dissolved. Cool. When the gelatin begins to set fold in one stiffly beaten egg white, one-half cup heavy cream, whipped, and one cup of shredded cocoanut. Serve very cold piled in glasses with whipped cream on top.

TIP-TAPIOCA

Soak one-half cup pearl tapioca over night in cold water. In the morning drain off any water which has not been absorbed. Scald one and one-third cups milk in double boiler, add the tapioca and cook 15 minutes or until transparent. Add two slightly beaten egg yolks and one-fourth cup brown sugar and cook until thick. Then add chopped figs from an eight-ounce can and let cook a few minutes longer. Cool slightly, then fold in two stiffly beaten egg whites. Serve cold.

FRUITY DESSERT

This is for emergencies. For impromptu you need some oranges, a can of chocolate syrup, whipped cream (or marshmallow creme) and a can of pineapple. Cut the oranges in slices, saving the juice. Spread them liberally with the chocolate syrup, piling one on top of the other. Top with whipped cream (or marshmallow creme) and sprinkle generously with the cocoanut.

PEACH HARD SAUCE.

Cream one-third cup of butter, one cup confectioners' sugar, one-fourth teaspoon vanilla and two-thirds cup diced and drained (or canned, crushed) peaches. Chill. Serve on hot puddings or on pastries.

Delinquent Children

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

WHY some children, without any special effort on the part of parents, grow up in an unemotional way, never stealing or playing truant or otherwise displaying antisocial traits while others again, despite everything parents can do, develop all kinds of undesirable qualities and seem often to be heading for a criminal career—the contrast between these two kinds of children is something nobody seems to understand.

Fortunately, however, does understand. At least, tremendous progress has been made in the study of delinquent children and of those of less strongly marked antisocial tendencies.

When a child gives more trouble than the average, especially when persistent lying and stealing or running away or lack of affection or viciousness be present the first thing to think about is the child's physical health.

There is no gainsaying the fact that a healthy child tends to be a well-behaved one.

It is likewise well-established that certain defects such as eyestrain, by dicoth or tonsils, adenoids and a host of other physical conditions may be responsible for incorrigibility and even criminality.

Anemia, heart or kidney disease, St. Vitus dance, malnutrition, tuberculosis and other wasting diseases may be to blame.

Therefore, think of these physical possibilities and have the child thoroughly and competently examined if your boy or girl is giving trouble beyond what is reasonable and natural.

The next consideration should be the mental ability of the child. Mental backwardness, if not the definite mental enfeblement, may be the real cause for a child's misbehavior.

One can scarcely expect a boy or girl to conduct himself in accordance with the usual standards if brain cells are diseased or absent.

Sometimes such conditions are present from birth, sometimes a severe illness or an injury is responsible. And often, indeed, the mental defect is one slight, yet highly important, that only an expert in mental disorders is capable of detecting it.

Yet these so-called "borderline cases" may be the most difficult problem children and the worst criminals. Having sufficient intellectual power to devise and plan, yet possessing at one and the same time a defective mind that cannot be relied on, such a child of this type of individual can readily become a menace because he passes for normal.

In all cases of delinquent tendencies the nervous constitution of the child must not be overlooked.

There are those who are unstable and high-strung and their misdeeds are nothing more than a reflection of sick nerves. There are also cases in which unusual ideas obsess the mind—in other words cases of functional nerve trouble or neurosis and the removal of such trouble immediately results in improvement of the morals.

Lastly, the possibility of glandular disturbance must be considered. If this be the case, the administration, by mouth, of glandin made from sheep and hogs often changes the entire character of the delinquent child.

THE TRUTH

About the Palace of Louis XIV.

By ELINOR GLYN

The sunset on the terrace of the Chateau of Versailles was the most beautiful last night, girls. The great orb disappeared beyond the lake in a crimson glow, and if you looked back you could see the reflection of it in the Hall of Mirrors, which gave the impression that the Great Gallery was lit up for some splendid fete. The effect was actually supernatural, because the rooms beyond, where there are no mirrors, were all dark.

I seemed to see some of the ghosts of the past walking slowly by. I told myself that it was the procession of "Mesdames," the daughters of Louis XV, being carried in their sedan chairs—because the poor dears felt the cold so terribly when they went to visit their mother, whose apartment was on the other side of the Palace!

Imagine the gilded sufferings of those days! Pinched in iron corsets—and with bare necks and elbow sleeves!—and living in rooms with floors of marble, five yards high and with no means of heating in the winter, but open grates with wood logs burning, and no heat at all in the vast passages! No wonder so many persons died young!

And then the drains! The absence in Louis XIV's time of all plumbing, so that the passages where the dozens of servants hurried by, and the Guards stood about became in such a state of pestilential filth that the Court periodically moved to one of the other Palaces to have the horrors taken away, and the whole place cleaned!

Now, girls, rejoice in the exquisite American hygienic arrangements. Do not take all your blessings as a matter of course, but be grateful for the splendid go-ahead American spirit which has brought you such comfort in living.

The Versatile Slice of Ham

New ways to prepare old foods usually results in a happier dinner combination, that pleases every member of the family.

A slice of ham is not a new or unusual piece of meat, but a slice of ham is a sweet, tender piece of meat, whose cooking possibilities are almost limitless. The slice of ham may be baked, boiled, pan-fried, scalloped with vegetables, cooked en casserole, braised in fruit juice, stuffed and roasted or breaded and fried.

Martha Lee

T h e h a m slice may also be cut into strips and combined with noodles, macaroni or potatoes and tomatoes to form a tempting one-dish meal.

In choosing a slice of ham, the housewife should select a cut from a fairly fat, well-shaped ham. The meat should be a rose pink and well marbled with fat and there should be a good covering of fat on the outside portion of the meat. This fat should be firm and white, showing a slight coat between the hickory and hard wood smoke.

I do hope you'll like these ham suggestions!

BAKED SLICE OF HAM
2-lb. slice of ham.
10 whole cloves.
½ dozen tart apples.
1½ cups light brown sugar.
½ cup water.
Parsley.

Rub ½ cup sugar into ham. Sprinkle with cloves. Place in baking pan and surround with apples peeled, cored and sliced in half crosswise. Sprinkle remaining sugar over apples, add water to pan; bake at 350 deg. F. until done (about 35 to 45 minutes). Serve on hot platter, garnished with cress or parsley.

BREADED HAM

SMOTHERED HAM
Sliced ham, 3 inches thick
6 whole cloves
1 cup stale bread crumbs
1 cup milk
½ tsp. salt
Pepper to season
1 tbsp. chopped onion
Brown sugar

Have the slice cut from the middle of the ham. Put in a baking pan. Pour over 1 cup boiling water. Stick the cloves in the top. Scald the milk, add bread crumbs and soak until soft. Then add seasonings and spread over the ham. Cover with a layer of brown sugar and bake in a moderate oven.

BROILED HAM SLICE

Cut 1 slice of ham 2½ lbs. slice ham cut ¾ to 2 inch thick; put in hot frying pan or under broiler; sear quickly; turn and brown other side. Lower heat; cook slowly until done.

CREOLE HAM AND NOODLES
½ package bread noodles.
1 slice ham.
4 tbsp. tomato sauce.
¼ cup grated cheese.
Bread crumbs.

Place ham in hot frying pan, sear quickly to brown on both other side. Then lower heat and cook slowly until done. Remove to one side. Cook the noodles which have been cooked in salted water to the fat in pan, then in tomato sauce and grated cheese. Mix carefully. Sprinkle with buttered bread crumbs and heat thoroughly. Place ham on a warm dish and surround with noodle mixture. Decorate with sliced tomatoes.

SCALLOPED HAM

Place a slice of ham cut ¾ to 1 inch thick in a buttered pan. Add enough milk or half milk and half water to just cover the ham. Place in the oven and bake about 350 deg. F., or moderate for 25 to 30 minutes.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE

HOBBY FOR CHILDREN

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

ROY'S mother was trying to be a good mother, but she was also trying hard to be a good housewife. Consequently, it irritated her beyond words to see stamps of all kinds and descriptions stuck away behind her best cake plate in her desk and in with Roy's clean shirts. Out they must go, she announced. No more foolish dawdling at stamps or anything like stamps. And out they went and flew was heartbroken.

In the first place, Roy had no room of his own but slept on a bed which was let down in the library whenever the guests folks got through using the room and decided he could go to sleep.

As a result he had no place of his own where he could indulge in his perfectly normal hobby of collecting things. If the mother had even designated a certain drawer or a big box which could have been exclusively his it would have solved the stamp problem. But she didn't think this collecting business was important enough to warrant such a waste of space in the crowded apartment.

But it was and is important. We go through the collecting and hunting stage. Pride of possession is perhaps the biggest factor in our collecting urge. That is what I call the "acquisitive period" at the time of boarding. As a child grows older, this collecting fad is a substitute for hunting.

Scientists say we repeat the history of the race, and it is easy enough to believe when you watch a child pass through the different phases of growth and development.

If you watch the men of your acquaintance who go hunting, you will find that few of them enjoy eating what they kill. The heads of the rabbits, squirrels and so on are given to their friends, but they keep the hunt. It seems to me we could dispense now with the primitive urge for hunting and find our pleasures along other lines.

And the hobby nearest to hunting is COLLECTING. Watch your men friends who hunt and see if they aren't avid collectors of something or other—guns or pelts, or books on big game hunting probably. But their love of hunting spreads out over the hobby of collecting things, and enjoying the pound joy of displaying them to interested friends.

So let your child collect things, whether it be stamps, or marbles, or penny nails, or eight hands. It is not carrying out a desire which he does not understand but which is very strong in most of us even when we are grown.

And if he is a boy, your child, wants to possess a gun, and shoot at things, encourage him to collect something—pennants, flags, antique glassware, ANYTHING to satisfy this desire, which is in reality one to HUNT but which can be managed by collecting objects of like form, color or significance.

A KISS FOR CORINNA

na, to remind her to treat this customer like a piece of Dresden china. Monsieur Julian exited.

Corinna got out her manicuring implements.

She took one of Denise's long, slim hands and placed it on a soft linen cushion. She then commenced the filing process.

Close to the cushion was a small green-shaded lamp. It shone deep circles under the eyes of the young operator. And her pale she was! Looked anywhow thinner, too, as though something were consuming her . . .

"Is she in love with him?" Denise asked of herself, her thoughts winging to the handsome Malvey!

"He are in love with him!" That thought persisted in Denise's brain as Corinn skilfully manicured her fingers.

To be in love—according to Denise's tenets—meant that one would be entirely ruth- and unscrupulous!

She would give a lot to know exactly how Corinna Dugan stood with the young man who was filling a special delivery letter.

She picked it up and tore open the envelope.

"Dear Ann Marie," Jeanie had written, "I am in an awful tangle, and I certainly am counting on you, dear, to help me out of it.

"Brooke and I are going to be married the first Saturday in June. Then I have invited thirty people to the wedding.

"It will be just a simple wedding—a white-satin altar out in the side-yard, a few roses around the house, and a few sandwiches and cakes and ices for refreshments.

"But, would you believe it, Ann Marie, I don't know how I'm going to have it unless you help me a little. Dad owes everybody in town and the Boston Store has refused to let me charge the white satin I need for my wedding dress! Besides that, the grocery store won't let us run an account any more. I should be so grateful much. We have to pay for every loaf of bread we buy there—and I don't know how on earth I am going to buy the things for the refreshments unless you send me some money. Love, Ann Marie."

"I would ask Uncle Hamby for one, but he has gone fishing up in Canada. There is no one left but you to help me, and if you don't I shall have to be married without any wedding dress and without any wedding-supper. Alice wants me to borrow the money from Brooke, but I'd die of shame if I did that. As it is, he is going to provide the wine to serve with the supper.

"If you have any money at all—even a hundred dollars—please do send it to me. I really need twice that much and don't know how I am going to get along if I don't have it. I'm just frantic with worry.

"Lovingly yours,
Jeanie.

P. S. Mrs. Leexy wants me to remind you that you owe her $28 for this month's payment on the car she sold you. Alice has learned to drive it, and has had only one small accident when she bumped into a tree and bent the fender."

Poor little Jeanie, thought Ann Marie . . . Of course she wanted a decent kind of a wedding when she was marrying into the rich Walters family! . . . Of course she wanted it white satin altar and chicken sandwiches tied up with white satin ribbon and a wedding-cake!

"And she's going to have them, too!" Ann Marie promised herself. "That town is never going to highhat her because she's poor. And while I have a dollar in the bank."

She sat down at the table and wrote a check for Jeanie for $150—almost every dollar that she had.

She was blotting it when she heard someone knocking on Nealy's door on the other side of the wall. The sound came clearly through the thin wall.

Then, after a moment, the knock came on her own door. Someone called the doorhandle.

"Anybody at home?" It was Leota Ingram's hard voice. "You in there, Ann Marie?"

Ann Marie opened the door.

"Isn't Neal back yet?" Leota asked, coming into the room and flopping down upon the day-bed. "I saw him the day before he left town and he said he'd be gone about two weeks . . . He's been gone three . . ."

"He told me he'd be gone only a week," Ann Marie answered her. "But he was going to get a lot of painting done while he was away—and I don't suppose he'll start back until he's finished it."

Leota snickered. "Him and his painting!" she cried scornfully. "You ogghta hear what the Terrill boys and some of the rest of the guys that draws for the magazines has to say about his pictures!—They say he couldn't paint signboards for a living! Well, he may be a wet-smack he an artist—but, say, ain't he a big shot for looks? Best looking guy this side of Sap's Crossroads, I always tell him."

She opened a pink enamel cigarette case, took out a fag and began to smoke.

"I hear he's chasing Alice now," she went on, blowing smoke through her nostrils. "I had a letter from Nealy of my bri from Paris home and that's what she told me. . . . And, s-a-a-ay, he better be careful not to get too gone on Alice, or, down there, or he's going to get into plenty of trouble with me!"

She tapped herself on the chest to show that she owned him body herself.

"He may think he's having himself a swell time down there," a brassy voice ran on like a strum of molten metal, "but I'm going down, myself, tomorrow, and have a little talk with him—and with Alice. She's gotta understan' that he belongs to me!"

Ann Marie raised Anne Marie.

Leota nodded her gray eyes shining wickedly under her gray straw hat.

"To me—and I got letters of his to prove it!" she said and got up to go. "I ain't going to tell about it now to anybody. But just remember this—your brother, Nealy, have made a fool of me, but no other man is ever going to!"

Her eyes fell on Jeanie's check, where it lay on the table.

Easy

by BEATRICE BURTON

Author of "The HOLLYWOOD GIRL"

CHAPTER 17

ON Sunday morning Alice broke all records and got up at 7 o'clock!

She had made her plans with Neal the night before to get an early start in the morning and escape the mid-day heat and the Sunday crowds on the roads.

For May had come in, hot as July. The town sweltered and smothered and got into its summer clothes for the first hot spell of the year.

But the morning was still cool and breezy in Nealy's big studio room when Ann Marie unlocked the door at half past seven and began to get breakfast.

She could hear Neal splashing and singing in the bath-room beyond his dressing-room as she moved about, setting up the folding table, spreading the gingham cloth and slicing the bread for the toaster.

"You're going to have a lonesome day all by yourself here, Ann Marie," Alice presently said when the three of them were having breakfast together a little later. "Neal won't be back 'til late tonight."

"I have so much work to do that I won't have time to be lonely," said Ann Marie.

She simply couldn't tell Alice that she was going to miss her. She wasn't going to miss her. She was glad that she was going at last.

"I've just about made up my mind not to even bank to town for a few days," Neal spoke up suddenly. "I've been thinking that I might stay with the Law's for a week or so, and do a little painting. I don't get much done up here, do I?"

It was on the tip of Ann Marie's tongue to say, "It's your own fault. You could get to work if you wanted to."

But she didn't open her mouth. She knew by this time that the only way to get along with Neal was never to hold him or criticize him.

Like 99 men out of 100, he wanted a woman to flatter him and humor him in every way. And she did everything he did was just right.

And for months Ann Marie had done just that. For, of course she was in love with him and blind to his faults. Partly because she was so soft and so young and good-natured.

"I shall miss you, Neal," she said quietly. "So please hurry back to me."

Soft, oddly enough, she did not mean a bit of that but Neal thought she did.

She had all of her housework in both flats done by 10 o'clock.

Her own big room looked bigger than ever before with all of Alice's things gone out of it, and all of hers own things back where they belonged.

A divine Sabbath peace settled down over the place. A sparrow chirped on a roof nearby, and once, during the morning, a robin burst into a song that praised heaven and earth and the month of May.

The month of May . . . Ann Marie smiled to herself a little bitterly as she thought of the plans she had made for the month of May this year. Of the long happy rides she had planned to take with Neal in the little car, skimming over the white sun-baked roads to the blue ocean for beach picnics and swims in the sparkling salt water.

And I haven't even had a single ride on that car of mine!" she said to herself, and she began to laugh.

And now that Nealy has taken it down home, goodness knows when I ever will see it again!

It was funny, and yet it was another thing to HUNT but which can't and never get a chance to ride on it, yourself.

• • •

By the fifteenth of the month Ann Marie had finished all of the alterations for Jane Goodwin's three frocks.

She packed them all up and sent them, by parcel post.

Before the 20th, three checks—each of them for $40—had arrived and Ann Marie banked them along with her weekly salary check on the following Saturday.

This afternoon she hunted up the address of the National School of Fine Arts in the telephone book, and started out on a trip just to walk past it and take a look at it. I shall be in it soon!" she told herself. "If I keep on working hard and save my money I shall soon have enough to come here and start my drawing lessons!"

She looked up at the great closed door of the building as if it were the portal of her dream. The dream she had had ever since she could remember—to be a really great painter, not just a hack-artist, doing fashion-drawings for Miss Hogan.

That night when she came back to the peace and quiet of the flat there was a special delivery letter for her lying on the floor just inside the door.

She stood, looking down at it for a moment, almost afraid to pick it up and open it . . . The writing on it was Jeanie's fashionable up-and-down hand.

What does Jeanie want now? she wondered.

From her past experience with Jeanie she knew that she wanted something from her—and wanted it badly—or she would never have gone to the bother of sending her a special delivery letter.

MAJESTIC TEST NOMINATIONS NEAR CLOSE

Midnight tonight is the deadline for entries in the Miss Majestic popularity contest. Get your nominations in now if you want to win that wonderful trip to Bermuda for yourself and a companion.

The Allen Tours of Boston are arranging the trip for the winner and they promise a glorious vacation. With the trip goes the thrill of owning a complete sports ensemble from the Barbara Shop. Returning home a model 181 Majestic Radio and Phonograph combination will serve as a permanent reminder of the contest and the joy of winning. All three of these awards are combined in the first prize to be awarded as "Miss Majestic."

The makers of Majestic Radio look forward to the next few weeks with intense interest as those now in the contest settle down to the fun of collecting vote coupons and casting them for themselves or for their favorite contestants.

Already thousands of votes have been cast, but the avalanche of ballots to get to start rolling in. Tomorrow the first list of contestants standings is to be published—but it is by no means the final lineup. Positions in the race will change from day to day.

Tomorrow's leader may lose his place overnight and someone to whom the last mad surge in the front. Not until the final ballot is cast is it possible to even predict who will be the winners.

Eight ways of getting votes have been provided, ranging all the way from newspaper coupons, worth 10 votes each, up to coupons distributed by dealers co-operating in the contest, which are worth as many as 15,000 votes each.

During the remainder of the contest, all who purchase tickets at Modern, Beacon or Globe Theatres in Boston, or the East Boston, Somerville or Central Sq., the Rexhall Liberty or Morton, the Rivoli Dudley, Sharon or Warren in Roxbury, the Janeiss in Jamaica Plain, the Rialto in Roslindale, the Regent in Norfolk Downs or the Embassy in Waltham will be given vote coupons good for three hun dred votes each.

Ballot boxes are located in the lobbies of all these playhouses for the reception of ballots.

Visitors of the Majestic Mystery Maid in the store of dealers who are co-operating in the campaign continue to attract attention and to arouse great interest in the contest. At Ben's Tremont Electric Co., 228 Tremont st., yesterday, her visit created a stir and a crowd in more than a de en new nominations as customers of this shop learned details of the contest.

Tonight, the first of many "Miss Majestic Nights" at popular entertainment places will be staged with the personal appearance of the Mystery Maid and her dance partner, Monty Pearl, Terpsichorean instructor.

The Mystery Maid will choose from the dancers at the Tent a couple who she judges to be the best dancers. To the girl so elected will be given a Majestic radio supplied by the Grigsby-Grunow Co. for the occasion. An opportunity will also be given her to present to vote for their favorite contestants through the distribution of special "Tent" ballots good for 200 votes each.

Tomorrow's program for the Mystery Maid and the contest executives provides for an air tour of the Massachusetts sea coast a relaxation from the arduous duties in connection with the contest.

Refreshed and invigorated the will return to the office on Monday and promise more and more thrills and surprises as the contest progresses into a race for votes with nearly 500 contestants all striving to collect vote coupons and to get up totals that will clinch the claims to the various prizes.

Interviews Contestants

During her visit to the Bmes-Luce Co. store at 70 Hanover st., the Majestic Mistry Maid, as usual, was the center of an interesting throng, including many who wanted information on the Popularity Contest.
